The Odyssey
Poway High School
Gary Bradshaw Advisor
Noel R. Mellon Editor-in-Chief

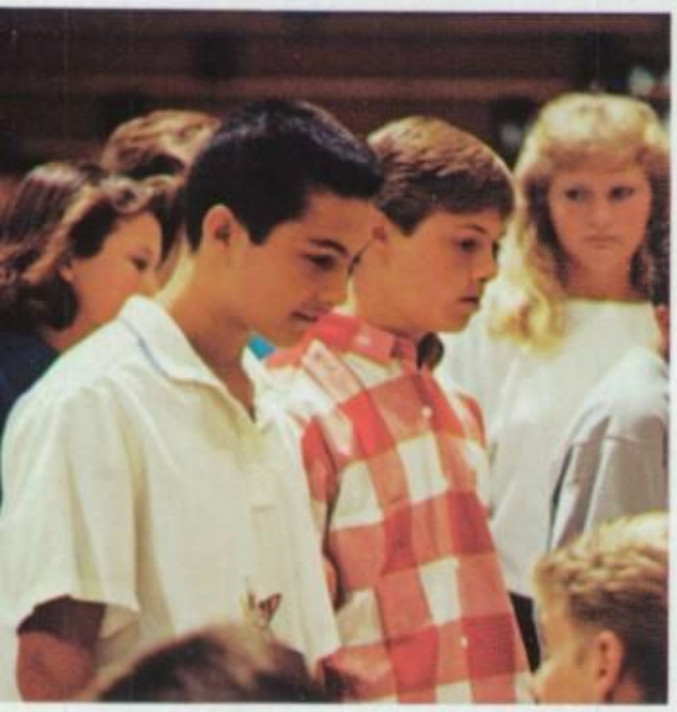
Students bound out of their cars ready to begin a new day.

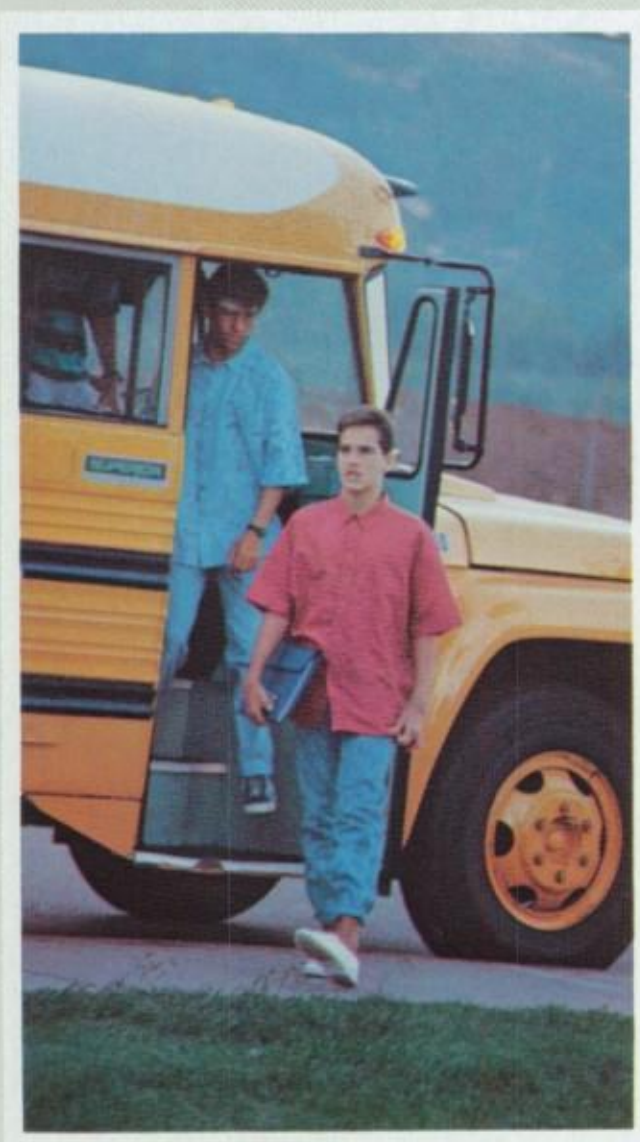


Geoff Johnston flips through schedules on the first day, looking to see if any friends share his classes.

Underclassmen Curtis Page and Chris Muckley worry about what teachers the computer randomly selected for them.

First Day

Like the early morning sunlight, the students filter through the front gates on the first day of school.



Stocton Reed, once off the bus, plans to break in his brand new folder and school supplies.

Three thousand uniquely individual human life forms poured into a campus created over twenty-seven years ago. On September 8, 1987, Poway High School came to life with achievers and progressers, learners and teachers. Previously, it sat empty — inhabited only by computer minds, shut in by tall, sharp black fences. In the East, the sun crawled over bulldozed mountains once inhabited by wildlife. The sun shone upon the anxious students as they made their way to the gym. Once in the lifeless structure, Titans waited in lines to receive their computerized schedules created by a micro chip counselor. Teachers and class periods became a surprise to underclassmen; they either thanked or cursed the computer that provided them.

Then a sharp bell sounded. Students bumped and dodged through the crowded halls and filed into classes. The first day had begun.

Four hours later a familiar and welcome sound rang through the classrooms and halls. Like flies, students buzzed and darted to lunch lines, carts, and to the ticket booth to buy locks for lockers. Lines formed, longer and longer still. Complaints were made and small talk came out of the mouths of Titans standing in the heat.

Three thousand students were kept in control by a few computers, buildings, a rulebook, and a large, black fence.

Seniors

"We finally made it," commented Shirah Madsen, "but there's a long road ahead of us." The class of '88 completed its last year of high school with a little hard work and a lot of determination.

But an addiction to fun helped along the way. Seniors avidly participated in tailgate parties, early-morning breakfasts, and raged in broom hockey. These activities united the class together for their last year.

Many seniors adopted an easier schedule. By taking work experience or five classes instead of six, they cut down the actual hours spent here on campus. On the other hand, some chose to take A.P. (advanced placement) classes and hit the books. "I might as well take the class now and get college plus high school credit," stated Monique Gaffney. All seniors faced "senioritis," that famed disease, at one time or another. They found it difficult to concentrate in class. "It's difficult to think about physics or English or economics when the rest of your life is right around the corner," stated Holly Franklin. Many nodded their heads in agreement with her.

Most all seniors began, struggled through, and completed the process of applying for college. As letters of acceptance or rejection filled mailboxes in the spring, they began to look ahead and think about the future. The next step for seniors, controlling the rest of their lives.

Peer counselors Carolyn Beattie, Paul Miller, and Melissa Dudek enjoy a lunch given in honor of new students.

Changes

"On your mark, get set, GO!" The newest addition to Titan Stadium, an all-weather track completed the four hundred-thousand dollar project. It replaced all others as the best high school track in San Diego.

The peer counseling program, advised by counselors Dave Boulware and Cathy Moran, developed into an even larger program. The Titan Center, remodeled over the summer, was utilized by many students planning their futures.

Road Work on Titan Way yielded more parking spots. The traffic problem, however, was still out of control. Steven Wrenn found a solution to the problem: "I just mess around after school until the traffic is gone." Waiting on campus instead in traffic lines was a good idea.

Coach Embry and A.J. Miller survey the quality and utility of the new all-weather track.

Road work and rework did not help the traffic problem on Titan Way after school.

Spirit

"Students smashing cars with sledgehammers on the quad? I have got to see this!" exclaimed a Titan passing by at lunch. Yes, it was true — the pep rally to really fire up Titans was under way in plain view. Guys and gals lined up to crunch the "Official Sundevil Vehicle." Muscle and spirit vibrated through the air as the car shriveled and became mangled. This semi-controlled pep rally allowed Titan spirit to burst out of control as it never had before. It was evident that the A.S.B. worked on improving the quality of the pep rallies. Many new and improved ideas were carefully planned out and executed. "Spirit really unites students. It gives us something to be proud and excited about," told Vicky DeBerry. Excitement definitely played a part in arousing Titan Spirit.

Class unity also spirited Titans. The scoreboard told no lies when it read that the seniors held the most points in the class competition. With crazy pep rallies and excited students, our campus became alive with a great amount of fun.

Underclassmen

"Hey Freshman!" yelled a rather large senior across the quad. A new atmosphere surrounded freshmen in their first year of high school. "I felt lost and confused," commented Steve Olson about the first week. Not only a huge new campus awaited their arrival, but a whole year of health class was scheduled by the computer for them.

Sophomores kept up the pace in their second year of high school, finally ridding themselves of the freshman name. A lucky percentage of the class of '90 utilized the reduced driver's ed program. "Although it was difficult to get in, I liked the more concentrated format that taught us the same things in one week that took a semester before," said Kevin Schuhl.

Juniors, with a sigh of relief, thought back through the trials of the roughest and probably most demanding year of high school. A big smile for summer and senior-land appeared on the faces of the class of '89.

Pat Phillips, after seeing a good-looking girl walk by, quickly loses interest in his homework paper.

The curse of the three-headed monster a.k.a Tony Matteuci, John Matteuci, and Jeff Clarkson, is still evident near classrooms on campus.

Sports

C.I.F. Banners fluttered on the gym wall. A question was posed: Would there be any additions throughout the year? Some Titan athletes strived to hold their titles while others worked towards gaining new. "The team (volleyball) was really excited over C.I.F. All we wanted was to win and win big!" stated Lynell Stokes, girls varsity volleyball player. With desires such as this, the athletes clearly showed the right attitudes.

Team unity combined with effective coaching produced winning teams. Coach Champion created interesting methods to fire up his teams. "I offer a steak dinner to each golf player who shoots below par. The inch of the steak increases with how many strokes below the player is." Coach Toretto uses a straightforward approach when uniting his teams. "I talk to them on the level. I say if they screw up they'll let themselves or their teammates down. We work together to achieve a common goal. That's what a team is really all about."

Rewarding experiences resulted from athletics. Self-awareness, leadership and goal achievement were a few products. Consequently, close friendship and support derived from athletics.

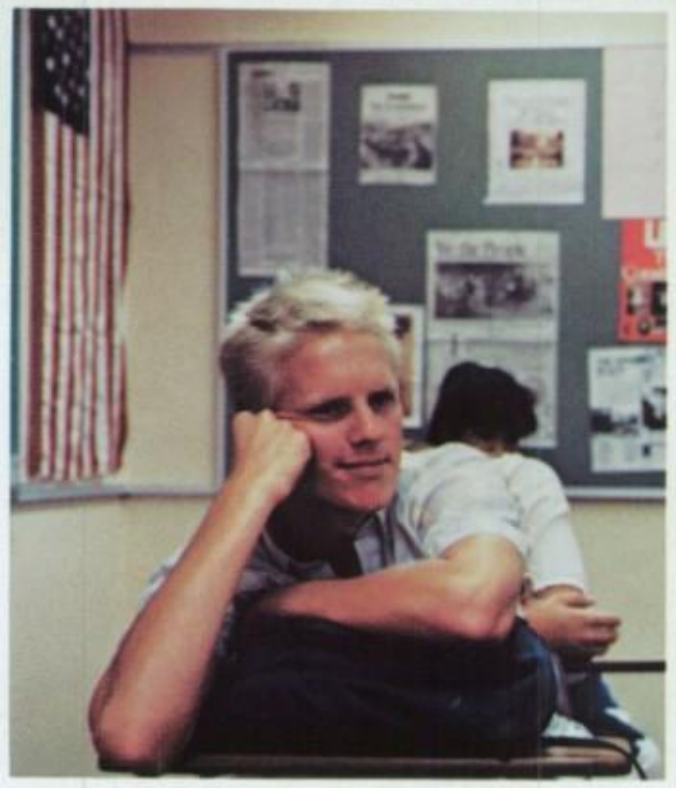
Academics



As Tommy Titan hits his snooze button for the last time, he decides to get himself up and ready for the challenging day ahead of him.

After showering and eating a healthy breakfast, he checks to make sure all of his homework he completed the evening before appears in his backpack. Then he trudges off to school like thousands of other Titans — all fired up for a new day.

We must agree: The principal reason we go to high school is to learn and enhance our education. And in attempting to do so, we make the best of it by including variety and as much fun as the rulebook allows. Getting out of control in the classroom may mean writing an action-packed story in English or creating your own entreé in foods. "One classroom that's definitely out of control is Mr. Torretto's. Between smashing his club on the desk and yelling out Biology terms we were forced to learn . . . but it was a blast!"— Mara Weiss.

With experiences such as these, students enjoyed learning in many classes.

Nightlife

"It's a secret!" stated Paco Domenich when expressing his plans for weekend evenings. Obviously true, for Titans hungry for excitement unfortunately find practically nothing to do in Poway at night. Yes, the ritual of dinner, movie, or dancing eventually sets in; but if one looks hard enough he will find some creative teenagers hard at work overcoming the Friday Night Blues.

Creativity and an open mind play a key role in the search for nighttime activities. Sometimes hunger persuades the body into late night shopping sprees. "One time I was so bored I resorted to grocery shopping for my family," remembered Brian Forkas. Revenge with fun in mind might lead one to a car that needs a little "decorating." Trying to get out of control may wear out Titans eventually, leading them into dreamland where night life is never missed.

Out Of Sight!

Many of us will reflect on this year with mixed emotions. The long hours of work we spent just to get through classes, tests, not to mention FINALS, often created bad times for students. Fortunately, activities such as Air-band, Broom Hockey, pep-rallies, etc. were present to overshadow any bleak experiences. As matter of fact, Poway High became a social-arena rather than just a school. Dances, includ-ing: Morp, Homecoming, and Prom allowed young men and women to share precious mo-ments together. The entire campus could sense the feeling of unity. These various events the students had partaken in, would provide long-lasting memories for the future. Student life at Poway High was certainly be-yond control!!!

No Room For Style

Warning: Normal behavior is absolutely prohibited. Violators will be subject to appropriate punishment." Ahhh yes, it was that time of year again — a time to forget all traces of self-consciousness and just let loose! Sven Crone, an exchange student from West Germany, commented, "You don't have to pretend at this type of dance, just be yourself and go crazy." MORP '87 brought geeks and nerds back to PHS in high style. "I'm glad that people were confident to dress-up really bad and still feel good about themselves," stated Senior Geoff Johnston. Dining couples could be seen eating their "gourmet" meals at odd places such as banks, traffic islands and even our own campus. The dance reached its climax when the king and queen of MORP were to be selected. The crowd overwhelmingly chose Juniors Kevin Berry and Karmyn Clark as the winners. Kevin recalls, "I wasn't nervous, just having fun!" Both of them believed that this honor would be a memory that could never be forgotten. Indeed, MORP '87 would be a night to remember for years and years to come!

Recapturing Weekend Memories

Boogie down. Abe Romero and P.H.S. alumnus Amy Anding sway to the popular sound of Cat Tracks.

Homecoming weekend began with a bang from the bright radiant fireworks that filled the sky. Old alumni from the earlier years joined in the festivities while the Emerald Brigade filled the air with its award winning sound. During halftime, the crowning of the queen and king occurred, proclaiming Greg Warden, Geoff Johnston and Tina Darby the winners. Other winners included the sophomores coming in first place for the float competition. The halftime events set the mood for the upcoming of "A New Beginning."

The crisp night air stirred up a romantic setting. It was homecoming 1987. The gym was decorated with red and blue streamers that hung from the gym walls. Students danced to the sounds of Cat Tracks. "Homecoming was really nice. I had a good time. I loved the decorations," stated Monique Sanchez.

Living It Up Royally

Although most of us will never attain the royal status of being a king, queen, etc. we often dream of it happening. For the 14 members of the 1987 Homecoming Court this dream became a reality. Most of the members received the honor with extreme shock and embarrassment. "I've always thought about being on the court but never believed it would happen," stated Jon Hoffman. The dream continued to the evening of the Homecoming game. Several members fondly recall the events of the halftime ceremony. Tiffany Monroe described the experience as "exhilarating." Jon Stefani added to this by saying, "My legs were shaking during the whole ceremony!" When asked about her feelings towards the entire event, Queen Tina Darby could only say, "Hey, I got two kings!"

Seniors on the court all agreed that the honor was a definite highlight in their years at PHS. For the underclassmen, more opportunities waited in the future. No matter what the case, however, the entire school was able to take great pride in the 1987 Homecoming Court.

Marching With Pride

With determination and pride the Emerald Brigade marched into another fall season led by Geoff Johnston and Matt Powers. After many long hours of rehearsals, learning new marching drills and memorizing music, the talented group of students were well-prepared for their competitions. "I roughly practice about 15-20 hours a week," explained Stephanie Lane.

Competitions began on October 3rd at the Escondido Tournament of bands. There they earned a superior rating. Between competitions, the band also performed at football games. Fight songs and the Mob Squad promoted enthusiasm among the students.

Many students saw their hard work and dedication pay off in other areas as well. Andrew Heimbold believed, "Being in band will give me an added edge in college acceptance." John Bishop looked towards the future when he stated, "If you know someone in the band, you may see them on records or you may find yourself going to one of their concerts."

The Emerald Brigade strived to do their best. Mr. Davis felt, "The enthusiasm and talent of this band is among the strongest, I have ever dealt with. It is with great pleasure and pride that they are part of the program."

Ten, nine, eight ... The bell has finally rung. Your stomach, impatient with hunger, is ready for lunch. Along with all the other hungry Titans, you head towards your favorite part of school.

Using the forty minutes, students took advantage of their free time. Socializing, studying and eating were part of the lunchtime activities. Lorin Tomiyama felt, "Lunch is the time to hear all the latest gossip." Students could be found relaxing on the quad, sitting in the cafeteria or on their way to McDonalds and Carls Jr.

Students who did not have enough time to do their homework studied in the library or in the Titan center. Bernice Biddlecome emphasized, "During lunch, I take care of any unfinished business."

Class competitions and music played on the quad gave a much needed break from school. "I really like to hear the music at lunch because it gets me in a good mood for my next two classes. I wish they would play it everyday," commented Kristina Klippert.

Students were free to do what ever they wanted. Lunch comprised an important part of student life at Poway High School.

Time Out For Fun

Picture this: A faint click followed by the ear-piercing sound of either music, bells or any other bizarre alarm clock melodies. Seem familiar? For virtually all Poway High students, this scene describes the grueling routine each of us faced five mornings a week, this year. However, for numerous reasons, Monday mornings possessed the power to be ten times as bad. "When I come to school on Mondays it's frustrating. I feel there should be something better," explained Senior Kelley Crawford. Despite the negative attitude students had towards Monday mornings, many were able to find compensation in the weekends. Whether it was at a movie, dancing at the local clubs, or just a simple night of relaxation, many students relished the two-and-a-half days away from the PHS campus. "Weekends are times to let school get out of the way and do other things. It's a time for recovery," stated Larry Wolski. Obviously there was more than met the eye when it came to the students here at Poway High. But then, come to think of it, maybe that's what made this school year so memorable.

Making It Come Alive

The lights dimmed, the crowd grew silent, the curtain slowly opened, and thus began Neil Simon's "Come Blow Your Horn." The play, which ran for five evenings during November, was well-received by virtually everyone who had the opportunity to attend. Being the first production of the year, things had to get rolling rather quickly. Auditions, prop buildings, costume design and dress rehearsals were only a few areas that needed to be addressed in the short period of time before opening night on November 5th. However, the Theater Guild/Thespians worked diligently and, once again, put together another excellent show. Much of the play's success and appeal was due to the ability of the cast and the off-stage crew to cooperate with each other so well. Andrea Tracy, the costume coordinator, commented "I'm happy because not just one person did it all. We all did this from scratch and entertained everyone. I feel proud." This teamwork rewarded the participants with a fun and exciting production as well as an experience that they, nor the students of PHS would soon forget.

Competition Spurs About Spirit

"The thrill of victory. The agony of defeat" — clichés we are all familiar with. This year, thrills and agony were experienced nearly every week with various class competitions. Whether it was the "Egg Beater" or the "Baby Bottle Gulp," competition ran wild. "It brings all the classes together in competition and it generates spirit," commented Dave Anet. The interesting and often humorous events were conjured up by a special ASB committee. Leslie Dean, the committee's chairperson, stated, "Our purpose is to create unity in the school by involving different types of people in competitions." The committee went over and above their expectations. Not only were the competitions well received, but the close running for first place promoted much spirit and made each contest better than the previous one. Senior Michele DeYarman expressed her feelings by saying, "This year's competitions have been the best out of my four years here." No one could disagree; most everyone enjoyed the competitions, and the memories created by them will be with us always.

Deadly Drive For Victory

"Suddenly, my face was smashed against the ice and someone started a dog pile on me," a senior explained excitedly after another famous game of senior broom hockey.

Three games were played at UTC by the class of '88. "Broom Hockey made the difference between a good weekend and a great one. It brought our class a lot closer together at the same time it brought a lot of fun to our senior year," commented Steve Wrenn.

Outfitted in jeans, helmets and shin guards, the competition was fierce. Each member of the team played to their fullest; that sometimes involved bruised shins and legs. Dave Delaney recalled, "The exhilaration of running down the ice and getting face planted by your best friend is the greatest."

Broom Hockey provided a fun atmosphere for seniors to participate in. And no matter how many falls and bruises that occurred, the seniors made memories they would never forget. "Broom hockey was the ultimate senior activity. It really allowed us to get crazy," added Brady Hamilton.

A Legal Escape

Celebrating holidays were what many students looked forward to. This broke the monotony of uneventful Monday through Friday weeks. Holidays gave students a chance to have fun and be a little crazy.

The first holiday of the year was Halloween. Students expressed themselves by dressing up in colorful costumes. "Halloween is fun because you can be what you always wanted to be," remarked Steve Kerr.

December marked the beginning of the hustle to prepare for the holiday season. Students showed spirit by wearing Santa hats and holiday sweatshirts.

Most important for many students was Valentine's Day. Everyone got a chance to show that special person how much they care. February also consisted of two Presidents' birthdays. "This allows me to enjoy a couple of days of intense skiing," explained Allison Oldham. Finally, Spring Break gave students a week of relaxation, so they could be prepared for the final quarter.

Holidays provided an opportunity for students to enjoy themselves. And as Mike Pattison stated, "I would probably go crazy without them!"

Mock Rocking Poway Style

There existed a time when the word "airband" meant absolutely nothing to Poway High School. Now, the annual Airband competition has become an important tradition on our campus. This year proved to be no different as bands upon bands came out to strut their stuff. After the final cuts were decided 13 bands moved on to perform before the entire community at the night show. The evening turned out to be a tremendous success as evident by the packed PHS gym. However, much of the audience showed signs of restlessness as "Skippy" a.k.a. Rick Rockwell recited the same jokes for the third straight year. "I believe we need to get someone other than Skippy," stated Robert Melotti. Fortunately, the quality of the performance was not hindered. Eventually, the tabulating of votes by the celebrity judges was complete and the six finalists were announced. The following day, after the Titan Time assemblies, the winners were named. First Place went to the Big Audio Dynamite. Second Place went to George Michael and The Nylons took third place. Regardless of the voting, everyone had fun and felt all the bands were winners.

Changing Traditions

"There were no Soviet air strikes so overall, it was a great evening," stated Dave McClain.

Winter Magic turned out to be just that, terrific. Despite, numerous conflicts with sports and a disagreement among the students about the type of music played, Winter Ball hosted over three hundred couples. "It was so crowded. I was really surprised," commented Stephanie Ross. AD.J. also distinguished this dance from others by playing different types of music. Stephanie Harris believed that, "The uniqueness of Winter Ball was the music. For once, I didn't want to leave early. I wanted to stay and see what they would play next."

Another aspect that made many couples want to stay longer was the festive atmosphere. Twinkling white lights and green and red streamers helped couples enjoy themselves. "We worked really hard to make the gym look exciting for the dance," stated Marci Baker.

As the night came to an end, everyone agreed that the dance was a huge success. Students got a chance to experience the traditional dance that was not so traditional.

Roaring to the UT Beat

Welcome The Untouchables!" Cries of excitement and anticipation rang through the crowd as the famed rock group burst into the gym. "I can't believe that a big band like this would come to PHS," exclaimed Anthony Goker. From their very first song, pulsating music erupted as The Untouchables played to a full crowd of four hundred couples. "The band fed so much energy into the crowd that it really made people want to dance," stated Darlene Baumanns.

Complementing The Untouchables, Sadie Hawkins was set to a 1920's theme. "The Roaring Twenties" was apparent as flappers and gangsters danced throughout the gym. "It was hard to come up with a costume, but it turned out to be an interesting and fun experience," commented Ally Shev.

Obtaining The Untouchables was not an easy task for the ASB and the senior class. "We had to go through several agents to even talk to the band, but the hard work paid off," explained Steve Russo. Sadies turned out to be an entertaining and a well-planned dance. The unusual theme and outstanding band set a future precedent for the Sadies dance. "The dance was a great success! Everyone I saw had a fabulous time!" stated Alisa Paraiso.

"For those who lost their date's interest to the Untouchables, I feel sorry; but with UT up front, many people transformed into mindless, energy creatures."

Prom Reaches New Heights

Where's Prom gonna be this year?" asked a curious PHS student. Soon, everyone wanted to know and time was running out. What was the cause of all this mystery? Well, due to a misunderstanding between Poway High and Camp Pendleton, the Prom reservation for the site was, somehow, lost. Needless to say, Junior Class President Dave Baker and his staff were left in a difficult situation. "I was really concerned because I knew finding another location would be tough," said Dave. After many inquiries, a site for Prom 1988 was, eventually, determined. The Prom took place at the NAS Miramar in a "TOP GUN" flight hangar. Although many students seemed skeptical about the location at first, the evening proved to be a total success. The theme tied in well with the surroundings and the decorations provided an atmosphere all Proms should have. Couples attending the event expressed positive feelings. "It was a fun-filled adventure that I'll always remember," stated Jason Appel. There simply was no doubt about it — Prom 1988 had the stuff that only the fondest dreams are made of!

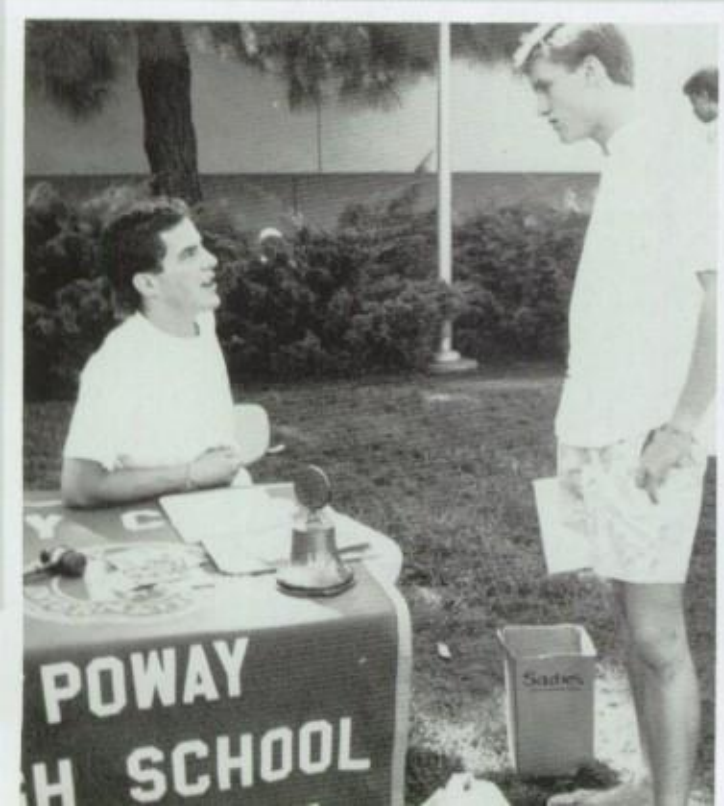
Clubs

"There certainly has been a renaissance in club activity at PHS this year."
— Mr. Weiss

Out To Get You

Push! "Let me in. Save me a seat. These were typical sounds of students trying to get into a packed club meeting. Membership throughout many of the clubs this year has multiplied like a bee produces honey. Now more than ever, students have taken an interest in what our school has to offer in the way of clubs. For example Trenace Beaudet felt, "I joined AFS, to learn about other countries." Officers from such clubs as S.A.D.D., Interact, and Key said that their clubs are the largest they've been.

Part of the growth was due to, the publicity that took place this year as well. "I don't think clubs would be as successful without the fliers received in first period. They are great reminders," stated Susan Pankau. Lisa Cotugno concluded, "I hope this enthusiasm in our clubs continues throughout the future as well.



"This food has got to go!' agreed Mike Hoffenkamp, Camille Zombro, and Doug Orvis.

Something pretty peculiar caught Christine Matthys and Lisa Mancinis' eye.

Choir/Orchestra

A Blending Of Harmony

by Gretchen Beck

A burst of music and singing rang through the air. The choir this year concentrated on two well-developed concerts, one performed in the winter and one in the spring. During the time the club met, they practiced contemporary as well as classical songs. The choir benefited from all who sang in it, but it really sprang up with several singers that took private lessons. Another large event that took up much practice time was the Thousand Voice Choir, which occurred on March 11th at Pt. Loma. "It's an oriented group that provides a positive musical experience," commented Mr. Musgrove.

The orchestra, being in its second year, grew immensely. It is expected to grow even larger next year with some very talented/incoming Freshman that wish to participate too. Most of the time was spent practicing for upcoming concerts and festivals, as well as solos and Ensembles. Shirah Madsen stated, "The harmonious sound of the instruments blending together is the greatest value."

Koko Hosoda studies her sheet music before she begins to sing a contemporary piece in her native tongue.

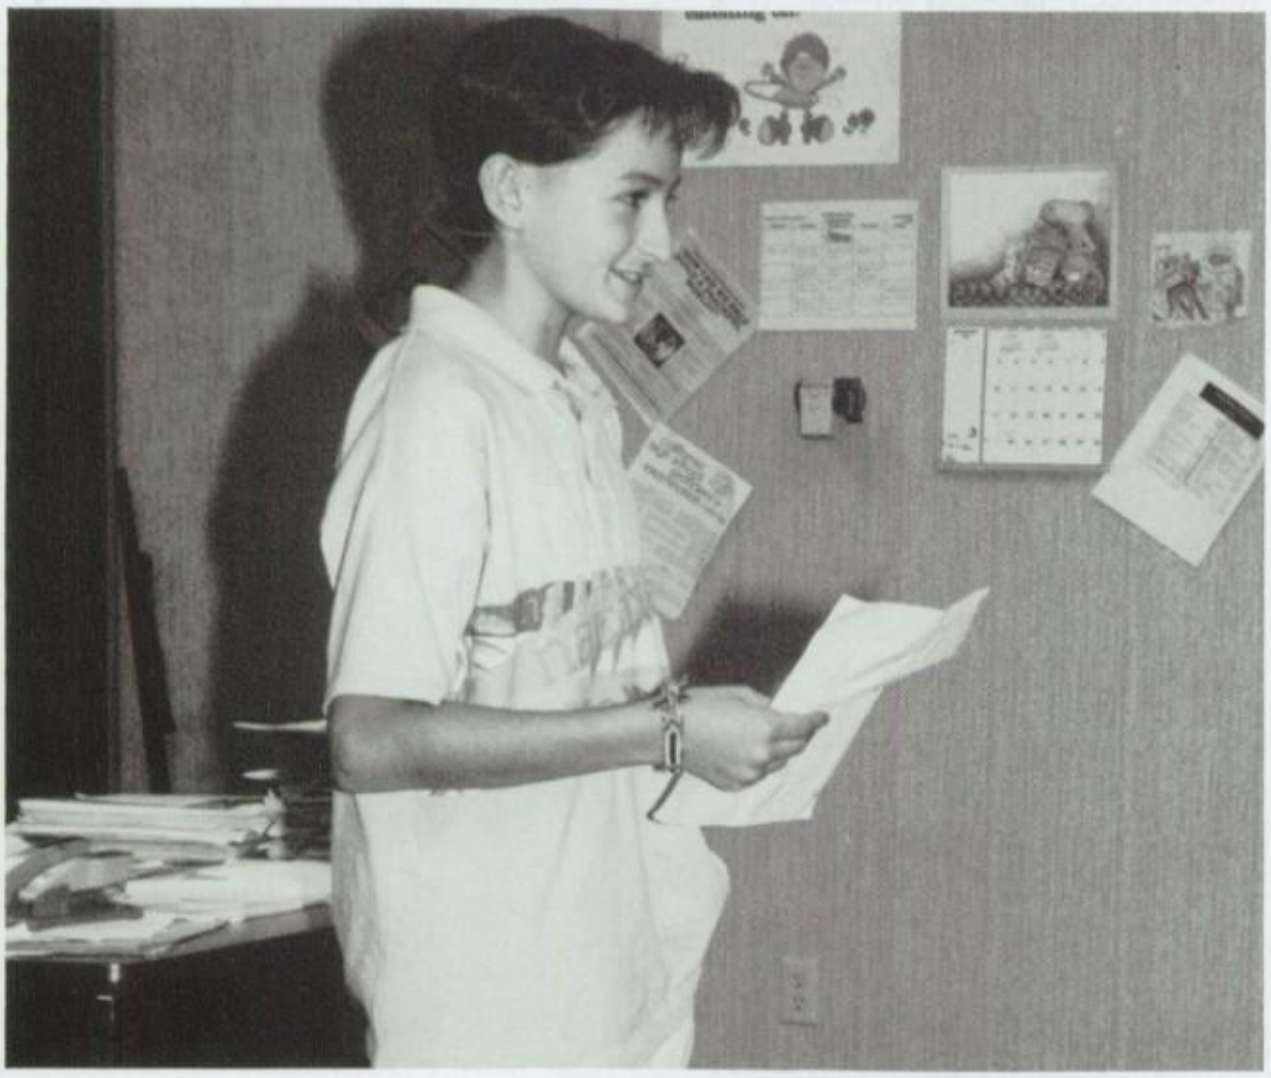
To Know Our World

by Gretchen Beck

Whispers echoed off the walls of the convention center. Representatives of different countries sat discussing the next item on the agenda. This was a typical scene of this year's U.N./International Relations seventh per. and club. Members of the club learned how to deal with international problems from a particular country's viewpoint. "The club has been an excellent way to study up on world issues," stated Ed Gall.

The club also discussed these world issues during class time. Any current event that interested anyone could be debated. Research also took up much of the students' time. The club was divided up into several countries. Each member needed to thoroughly investigate this particular country's beliefs on certain topics. Chris MacIlroy concluded, "It's not only being able to see what's happening in the world, but to be able to take the position from someone of another country and see their views."



Ah yes, another exciting world issue, murmured Tyrone West.

Acting Up

by Gretchen Beck

"When the adrenalin starts flowing and you are all psyched up to do your best, the minute you reach the stage you're just overwhelmed," exclaimed Pam Pochel. However, the Theatre Guild did not actually act within the club, but instead did fundraisers in order to raise money that went toward school plays and also to participate in special conventions. SCETA was one of these in which the actors were able to perform and learn of how acting techniques. A great deal of money also was raised for the new theater to be built sometime next year.

Individually many saved their money too in order to go to New York over Christmas break. While in the city the actors saw four plays, and learned of the wonders of being on Broadway.

The talent of the students was expressed by performing Come Blow Your Horn at the La Jolla Playhouse Young artists' festival. Many of the actors enjoyed the new experience of entertaining for a larger group of people. Kristen McCarthy stated, "I like being up on stage trying to entertain people when you say a line and you can feel the audience getting involved. It's the best reward."

Varsity

Dedicated To Perfection

by Andrea Hayek

"It gave me a warm jacket," joked several Varsity Club members about their letter. However, beyond the warm coat, the true story was spoken. It took devotion to a sport to earn the letter now worn so casually by those who lettered. Brad Herzog remarked that your letter was an, "Accomplishment to be proud of."

The club sponsored fundraisers, such as selling popcorn and snowcones in order to pay for their banquet, CIF flags for the gym, and to help needy students with their transportation fee. In addition one only became a member after a secret initiation.

The letter was a symbol of an individual's work, but as Paige Smith explained, "We all strive to achieve our goals in separate sports, but the Varsity Club ties us all together." And certainly the members experienced a unity.

S.U.N.S.

by Andrea Hayek

"Peace on earth, good will towards men," for some may just be the words of an old song. However, to the members of S.U.N.S. (Students United for a Nonviolent Society) it is something more. This past year S.U.N.S. actively spread the word about organizations dedicated to the preservation of human rights and peace. These people, though they may seem few, spent time discussing political, and other issues. They agreed that many people, "Associate peace with the 60's, but it still needs to be worked at today."

The club was responsible for the Peace Fair, and participated in Freedom of Expression Week, and helped its members, who shared similar beliefs to get together.

Grapplettes

"Being part of a winning team is the best part of being a Grapplette," replied Stacy Shadoff. The Grapplettes were the counterparts of the wrestlers. As Amy Phillips explained, "We are solely responsible for scoring the matches." In addition, they are the official timekeepers, alerting the referee when the match is over. The club acted as the "guardian angels" of the Varsity wrestlers, giving them gifts and boutonnieres before each tournament. Leah Heppel pointed out the opportunities of the club to, "Make a lot of new friends and get to know the wrestlers." Though the girls joined the Grapplettes for many reasons they had a common goal of supporting and helping the wrestlers. Continued success, to the wrestlers and those who stick by them through good and bad.

Skilled Potpourri

by Andrea Hayek

"Once you get a taste of Lacrosse, it becomes an obsession. It's not just another game, it's a way of life," explained Cory Carter. For those who haven't heard of Lacrosse, such dedication would be puzzling. One must understand the game to see why it can be addicting. When asked to compare the game to other sports it was agreed, "There is none. It's a combination of all. It requires speed, agility, endurance, finesse, a sixth sense, and a love for violence." David Bruno's description provided the best means to visualize the sport, "[It's] a little like hockey on the grass." Lacrosse might not have been the most well-known sport, but the enthusiasm of the players has done much to publicize it.

Non-Members Different Interests

by Gretchen Beck

The lunch bell rang, and the masses came pouring out of doors that went flying open. Some of the students hurried to club meetings, while others strolled slowly to their eating places on campus. Others raced to their cars to go out to lunch. While club members tried to prepare for their meetings and or listen to them, the "Non-Members" were out enjoying whatever they liked doing during lunch. "I enjoy talking to my friends at lunch and I'd rather relax a little rather than be bothered with a lot of hectic club meetings," stated Julie Schlecht. Some just didn't want to be bothered with commitment. For many of the clubs did take much time after school which a lot of students were not willing to give. Some students' took more interest in their jobs or activities that took place outside of school. Janeen Graff stated, "It's too bad that there isn't a club that interests everybody. This would be the ultimate goal for PHS."

Cheerleading

Toil & Play

by Andrea Hayek

"We act as a liaison between the crowd and the players," commented Jenny DeBerry. Though that sums up what cheerleading is about, it doesn't account for the hard work and time that goes into it. Those brave souls that stand before PHS at football, basketball, soccer and other games, didn't get there without effort. Many hours during and after school, approximately 8 a week, were spent in practice. Though it may seem that cheering is all highs even the most spirited feel down when, "The crowd doesn't show up," remarked Sandy Dempsey.

As a result of cheerleading many strong friendships were built. The cheerleaders seemed to agree with Cherie Stallings, "Making memories and getting to know each other," was the best part of cheering. Even though cheerleading may be traditional, the increased responsibility has led to a hard work beyond that of the traditional squads.

"Ouch!" The Varsity cheerleaders go into the splits to successfully complete another mount. Many hours of practice led to perfection.

Meaningful Expressions

by Gretchen Beck

A nervous student shuffles hastily through a pile of three by five cards. Walking slowly to the podium the speaker clears his throat to begin. Fear and frustration were a part of the seventh period class. However a sense of learning as well as accomplishment filled the students minds. The members could either choose to be speakers or debators on a particular subject which they investigated thoroughly. The research and practice sessions took place during the seventh period class time. Whereas the contests were held throughout San Diego County on weekends.

Different types of speeches made up the curriculum. Expositories, which required a visual aid, and Oratories which described the particular subject, were a few of the students favorites. Impromptus were a type of speech experienced by all. But seemed at times to be difficult. "Impromptu's really put you on the spot, but they help craft oneself into a better speaker," stated Monique Dabbs. The Debators learned the techniques of expressing an opinion, to where they could support and argue it thoroughly. Amber Meshack concluded, "This year we all have learned to express ourselves meaningfully."

German

by Gretchen Beck

Wie Ghets? This typical German remark could be heard from friendly members practicing their foreign tongue. This year was the clubs first year with Frau Bahmani. The members that attended the meetings wanted to learn more about the culture of the German people. "The club showed me how another nationality lives," stated Todd Simpson. Topics anywhere from traditional beer drinking songs, sung in Haufbrauhaus's to King Ludwig's castle were discussed. The club participated in many events with schools from around the North County area. For example the members attended a German camp, which consisted of a weekend where both the language and culture were enjoyed. A club that both taught a language and a culture benefited all who attended. Mrs. Bahmani concluded, "I like to see my students both learn and enjoy themselves".

Writers

"Let's make the circle smaller." This phrase was a usual one heard at the Writers Anonymous meetings. The circle was the place where all learning, listening, and understanding took place. Anyone that took their writing seriously, whether they were interested in it as a career, or for enjoyment could join. The club was also known as a sharing place. Members that had particular writings that they wanted others to hear would read them aloud. Other members would then offer their opinions. "It gives you an insight and strengthens your writing to make it better," stated Allison Ryal.

Creativity also was a major part of the club. Many members felt that you have to look at the world with a pair of "poets eyes," in order to become a good writer. Andy Bailey concluded, "Writers Anonymous allows myself and other members to write freely in a way that we don't have to worry about being graded, which makes us all better writers."

Academic Team

Breaking The Mold

by Andrea Hayek

"While most of the other teams are 'square', Poway's team can better be described as irregular polygons." For those unfamiliar with the Academic team, it's similar to Trivial Pursuit, but the opponents are from different schools. The squads met three times a week to practice, however the practices were not what many might expect. Rather than serious faces, one would encounter bedlam. Brian Snyder joked, "[We're] over 40 of the best minds at PHS roaming the county looking for fun and raising . . ." The team spirit was evident in practices and meets as each team cheered the other on. Laughter got the teams through both catastrophes and conquests. Overall it provided the opportunity to meet other students and make lasting friendships.

Ski

A New Foundation

by Gretchen Beck

"It takes a lot of hard work trying to get a club back on it's feet," stated Leslie Sharp. This was a rebuilding year for the Ski Club. Due to the break up of last year's club, this year proved to be quite a task to undertake. They started out with just a few members. And with just these few they still managed to have fun. Several one day trips were planned to nearby skiing, such as Big Bear. They also tried to reinstate the Vail trip which the club hoped would interest more people to become members. Lisa Mancini felt, "The ski club would be of more interest to more people if the Vail Trip could become successful once again." Many of the officers felt that they aimed to have fun and make members aware of the ski areas and services available to them.

Beneficial To All

by Gretchen Beck

Hey, have you heard there's an Interact meeting today?" This was a typical phrase that could be heard by many. In one year it became one of the most popular clubs at PHS. Most of the credit went to the officers who helped develop the club. Interact was centered around community services that were sponsored by the Rotary Club. It's main emphasis was helping people, and to have fun at the same time. "Fun people helping others, meeting friends, and giving a little of your time is what Interact is all about," stated Michelle Downey. One of the community activities that Interact helped with was the annual Pow Wow Day Parade. A carnival as well was put on to help benefit needy children. And a Campaign was fought to help prevent Polio, called "Polio Plus." Tina Darby expressed, "Interact has given us a focus for what others need, and when we try to meet these needs we find that we ourselves have benefited."

Amnesty Helping Others

by Gretchen Beck

Amnesty International worked for the freedom of unfairly imprisoned persons around the world by writing letters and gathering signatures on petitions. "Our group not only helped others but also learned about the world in general." This is how Mrs. Dabbs described the club. Sending written statements in order to help free people was the main emphasis of the club. However, before the club could write anything they had to get word from the main office in London on the imprisoned.

International dates that supported the clubs views were incorporated in this year's events, also. For Example Dec. 10, was Human Rights Day, when anyone who wanted to, could wear a paper blue candle supporting humanity. Many sad stories that denied people's rights also affected many. Mike Hoffencamp stated, "When you hear stories about three-year-old girls being tortured, it hits close to home, and then you know you have to help."

"Hating math is like hating breathing: Unrealistic and bad for the head," commented Tommy Hsiu. Many students who feel math is the main source of misery in high school must have difficulty understanding this statement. The members of Mu Alpha Theta do not. Mu Alpha Theta is an honorary math society open to those students with a "B" average or higher. This prestigious organization, (impressive on any high school transcript) included those students who excel in the field of mathematics. For those who wonder what is exciting about math, Chris Weber, with a devilish smile answered, "Solving a complete integral or derivation makes mathematics a most fulfilling and rewarding task." Jennifer Coon joked that if you hate math you should, "Go to a college that has no core curriculum, if you can find one." So next time you grudgingly do your homework, think about those who enjoy it.

As the gears get moving they produce a steady hum . . . such can be said about the minds of CSF members. Once these minds get moving they stay in a constant motion in order to overcome AP and Honors classes, the SAT and Achievement tests, but possibly most dangerous — SENIORITIS. If all the obstacles are overcome you have before you a CSF Life Member. CSF, the California Scholarship Federation, is made up of those students with a 3.5 G.P.A. or higher. The organization raises money for scholarships thru fundraisers such as the selling of Turkey and Easter Grams. The members then may apply for the scholarships. Every member must feel some incentive to work. Teri Miley shared the reason of many, "I have to work hard since college is so competitive." Jay O'Brien also commented, "If you work hard you will feel more confident and a lot better about yourself."

NHS seems to have a tremendously low key reputation. It has no officers and no meetings. Furthermore, it has very stringent requirements for membership — a 3.75 G.P.A. and involvement in at least two extra-curricular activities. So you ask, , "What kind of club is this?" No club, but a National Honor Society. The hard working students who qualified for membership must feel honored. For Kim Hester, "It helped me prove to myself that I can succeed if I try hard enough." The members also had various reasons for working so hard. Diane Decker also had some advice for that student who doubts they'll survive another Lab day, "You only get out of life what you put into it. If you want to choose the path your life takes instead of letting it pass you by . . . the work now will have its benefits later."

Peer Counseling

Through Rain Or Shine

by Andrea Hayek

"Outrageous, compassionate, intense, fulfilling, exciting, important, loving, unique . . . " were the feelings of several of the Peer Counselors about the program. It would be hard to miss the impact of the P.C.'s this past year. Whether before or after school, lunch, or during classes you could more than likely find one to help you. The counselors made new students feel at home with campus tours, while also counseling those with personal and school problems.

Tracy Huntington expressed the attitude of the P.C.'s by advising, "That you should not be afraid to ask one of us for help." You may wonder what inspired 60 people to give up some of their time to help others. The counselors had many reasons. Ross Furukawa, "Saw the need for a program like Peer Counseling . . . " Paul Simpson wanted, "To help and support others." Also the counselors learned from their experience. Adrianne Johnson said she learned, "How to deal with her own problems." Christine Fagan added, "I hope that this program will make a difference in the years to come," other optimistic counselors shared her feelings.

Key Community Spirit

by Andrea Hayek

"That I like most about the Key Club is the interest people show in helping other people," stated Robert Melotti. And quite simply that's what the Key Club is all about. This service organization hosts various fundraisers for different causes. Perhaps most well known is the Toys for Tots food and toy drive. The drive which runs for the first half of December makes many homeless very happy. Mara Weiss, a Key Club officer said, "The club has really grown and prospered this year. We are a very prolific (productive) organization, and our members are really involved." Support was definitely needed for such activities as the March of Dimes Walk-a-Thon, Bake sales, and a coloring book sale to help the Kiwanis Club. All the members had to give up some of their time, and the payoff for doing so must have been a job well done.

The color has to be perfect, for the elaborate piece that Cheryl Pitcher plans to paint.

Crouched over, with paint brush in hand, sat a diligent artist at work. After many hours, the last stroke struck the rice paper, and a contented expression appeared. Being pleased with one's art work was a major plus for the Art Club this past year. The students practiced and learned new techniques, which gave them a real feeling of self-worth. Knowing that they had created something as well, uplifted many of the artists. "I see evidence all the time of incredible amounts of creativity heightened by self-esteem," stated Mrs. Zacharias.

The new room, H-I, gave the students a more conducive atmosphere in which to work. Every Tuesday after school, the members could be seen "creating". But the club was not just confined to their own art work. Field trips to museums and local art exhibits opened many minds to many different art mediums. Keith Roberts concluded with, "Getting together to share different ideas about art helps create better artists."

ASB

New Regime

by Andrea Hayek

The most satisfying aspect of ASB was contributing back to the school which helped further our educational experience," replied Marco Mendoza. The hard work of the ASB was most evident around the campus. They had the responsibility of organizing all of the dances which previously had been hosted by individual classes. The many lunchtime activities were also sponsored by them. Billy Wraith expressed the higher goals of the ASB, "We tried to get activities more organized and take them one step further." The ASB was also responsible for organizing the Air Band Competition, the Election Campaign assembly, and other Titan Time activities. Our representatives say that the ASB had taught them many valuable skills. Todd Sawyer remarked that he has, "Learned to deal with other people and businesses throughout the community." Steve Russo added, "The ASB had taught me how to be a leader and how to build confidence in myself." The ASB bore many responsibilities such as promoting school spirit and involvement, and through all this, Leslie Dean commented, "A group of people became a group of friends."

Striving Volunteers

by Andrea Hayek

"Everybody should give some time to charities," commented Mrs. Liska. Keywanettes is a community service organization that has done everything from hosting the Special Olympics for the handicapped to acting as guides during College Night. Some of the many activities this year were sponsoring bingo at the National Health Center, acting as hostesses for awards ceremonies, and modeling for a fashion show at Buffums. According to Kari Ward, "The convention is the best part," of the year. The convention consists of workshops on leadership, and awards for the most improved and active. Though the club is active Teresa Whiting commented, "Everybody is friendly and they don't push you to do things." In addition to the community service, the club allows its members to get to know one another and become good friends.

Math

By Gretchen Beck

The room was quiet and still, as the members of the Math/Computer Club thought about numbers, and formulas to a complex problem. Although some aspects of the club proved to be challenging, anyone, could join. "We basically get together to have fun in a social environment," stated Kelly Stevens.

State competitions were a big part of the club too. Poway has for the last couple of years ranked rather high. "Such contests show me what I really know," stated Mikie Shen.

Guest speakers, taught the members about different ways to use math in new and fun ways. This gave the members insight, which sparked new ideas in these two areas. Many of the members felt that being surrounded by their peers who had similar interests, allowed them to be teachers, and to most of all learn from each other.

FBLA

Facilitates the transition from school to work.

Builds confidence and aggressive business leadership.

Leads students to a better understanding of the American free enterprise system.

Assists students in the establishment of occupational goals.

This year's FBLA not only met their requirements, but they went over and beyond them as well. One way was through leadership conferences that were held both at the state and national levels. "Through these conferences we promoted leadership and business awareness," stated president Traci McClellan.

A great deal of learning took place in the club as well. Guest speakers taught the members what the real world of business was like. Advisor Mrs. Vicki Wilson felt that "FBLA has been a fun way to make students aware of the challenges of the business world."

Collected Creativity

By Gretchen Beck

Crinkled, and stomped on newsprint covered the campus on a Friday afternoon. An Iliad staff member strolled sadly down the halls as he gazed down at the disarray. A seemingly endless amount of time was put into the newspaper this year in the hope of crafting it to be the best ever. Sarah Benson stated, "The Iliad requires a lot of hard work, for very little gratification, and yet it still manages to be fun."

A larger staff this year, with a total of 21 members, allowed the paper's different sections to have a wider variety of writings. However, the increase of members did not all together eliminate the stress factor. Mara Weiss stated, "On any given day in Iliad, one can find staff writers running around frantically, myself in a state of subdued panic and Ms. DeLuca laughing."

The new advisor, Ms. DeLuca, not only eased the tension with her sense of humor, but was always willing to assist anyone. "I always wanted to be a journalist now I can be one vicariously through my talented students."

Awareness

By Gretchen Beck

"The growth of S.A.D.D. this year, made many students more aware of substance abuse," stated Cindy Stenger. The members felt that everyone should join in this increasing problem.

S.A.D.D. supported and maintained the safe rides program, offered to anyone who needed a ride from 10-3 am every weekend.

The club also sponsored several events. Oct. 25-30, was official red ribbon week, where anyone could wear a ribbon to state that they believed in being drug free. In June an assembly was held with the theme of "Friday Night Live." The event was mainly to stress the severity of drunk driving. Nicole Neumeyer felt, "Hopefully S.A.D.D. will wake them up."

"Surfing is Life . . . the rest is details," expresses the attitude of the surfer. The dedication to the sport includes braving freezing weather and water in hopes of catching the "perfect" wave. On top of this, they face the drive to the beach only to discover the waves are all of one foot high. Yet Eric Smith said it was worth it, "When you catch a wave." The surf club came into existence some time in the past, but it was revived last year, and successful this year. The club sponsored competitions which gave the members an opportunity to compete against one another. Though the competitions are judged by independent judges, Erik Peterssen commented that, "In any competition the toughest judge is yourself." Brian Wilson added, "The competitions are very hard when you're under pressure and there's only 15 minutes to do your best." The thrill of surfing is, "Hard to put into words," said Jeff Cundiff. Andy Seidensticker's last words on the subject were when it comes to surfing, "People shouldn't speak with words but with actions." So next time the waves are big . . . watch out!

AFS

Melting Pot

Germany, Venezuela, China, Sweden, these are just some of the places they come from. Who are they? None other than the foreign exchange students. If you ever wanted to get to know them, they could often be found with the AFS club. AFS was an organization through which students could transfer from their own country to another. They came for many reasons; Anna Birkholz of Germany came because, "My friends who went came back and said it was great." However, many members of the club were not foreign exchange students. These people joined for other reasons. Jennifer Smith commented, "I talked with some of the exchange students and they made it sound exciting." The club hosted many activities to introduce these "foreigners" to the American culture. Christine Matthys, President of AFS, commented, "It's interesting to learn about other cultures," and AFS surely offered this opportunity.

MINI MAG

Born Again

As students rounded the corner on Espola coming from Rancho Bernardo, glimpses of red slowly emerged through the trees and the sparkling of lights grabbed their attentions. At last they would catch their breath as the new Titan stadium came into full view. For the last few years the school has been trying to raise money for the new Poway High Stadium. Campaigns such as "Bring Home the Titans" and purchasing a name plate for a seat in the stadium had helped raise $150,000 by the end of the school year. This money was used to build P.H.S. one of the best tracks in Southern California.

Along with the new track, P.H.S. had been graced with the presence of strategically placed black, iron fences. These fences helped protect the school, when we hosted home games,. and gave students more freedom when they attended the variety of school dances. Along with more freedom to roam, the freedom for groups of friends to attend dances without being in couples was presented by the new dance policy.

With all of these additions which were freedoms as well, the 87-88 school year was in the least, outrageous.

— Since they've been here a year, they've become invisible to me. That's probably a comment about how well they blend into the rest of the school environment. — Gary Bradshaw

United Fashions of Poway High School

by Sarah Massengill

Ladies and Gentlemen, Poway High School proudly presents, "The Look of the 80's!" The theme of the show today is "The Family Photo Album." Yes, folks, believe it or not, everything that's stylish these days can be found in that great leather-bound book which sits on the book shelf. Now, brushing off the dust from the cover, the journey through decades of family heritage will introduce what exaclty the "Look" is.

Ah, look at Grandma when she was a teenager, and how handsome Grandpa looked in his fashionable, calf-length trench coat. This look, famous in the 20's, was renewed in the 50's and again in the 80's. Now however, both men and women wear these coats and often shoulder pads are added for more of a geometrical shape.

Turning the page, pictures of Mom and Dad dating appear. Mom's short mini, topped with a tight sweater really went well with Dad's over-sized, leather jacket. Also, in this picture of the Sock Hop, they look totally "styling." Dad's wearing his Levi's torn at the knee and rolled at the bottom, and for the women, cropped pants with wide belts to tie the outfit together. In the pile of discarded shoes, we see the ever-so-popular "Creepers" and many colorful heels or oxford-styled shoes. Moving on we see the loving couple honeymooning in Madrid, Spain. Look at this outfit Mom's trying on. It's a pair of black pants with a short, matching jacket which I believe is a matador's costume. Ah and look at the black, wide-brimmed hat which Dad has suavely tilted to one side. Olé!

Here they are outside of a small boutique. Mom's posing playfully in the black, layered skirt which with age, has lost a few layers, thus decreasing its length.

Now, after returning to the U.S.A., having a few children, and surviving the 60's, the 70's were upon everyone. Oh, look at Mom's hair! Usually worn down, the style is long and sleek. For the men, hair is long as well, and a new rage is ponytails. Also present are the renowned tie-dye shirts. These too were affected by evolution. Now, shirts aren't the only particles of clothing to get dyed, skirts, pants, anything people can get their hands on. The last few pages of the book are dedicated to the most recent family trip to Baja California. Everyone's wearing Flojos, Huaraches, or Corona T-shirts. Well, the show is over. It's fun to look back upon the good ole days but be warned: If you laugh about yesterday's fashions, you'll probably be wearing them tomorrow.

IN YOUR OWN WORDS: What do you think influences modern-day fashion the most?

We Got It!

by Sarah Massengill

It started at one end and gradually built up, working its way across the bleachers where it would rebound and return as quickly as it came. This was known as the Poway High School Wave and was popular with the crowds at P.H.S. The students were really responsive to the cheerleaders and more students than ever participated in pep rallies or attended games.

This year the Pep Rallies were extremely popular with newer, more original ideas. A few of the many activities included the "Use the Eggplant in the panty hose to move the golf ball" Roll and the spirit yell. These unique events attracted more competitors for the Class Competition.

Along with the Rallies was the ever-so-famous Halloween Costume Parade. This year's lucky winners were the glamorous Bag Ladies! Also popular were the Hari Krishna cult and the Freddy Kruger character. Yes this year, class participation had reached an all time high. Everyone remember, however, that it could not have been possible without you and your school spirit!!

Adventures at PHS

by Sarah Massengill

Every morning between 5 and 7 A.M. alarm clocks could be heard buzzing throughout Rancho Bernardo and Poway. After proceeding to hit the Snooze button several times, or even throwing the clock against the wall, everyone rolled out of bed. Thus began the meticulous preparations for the day ahead. Tommy and Tina Titan would both stare into the mirror, while gargling mouthwash, and try to organize in their minds exactly what needed to be accomplished within the next 7 hours. Upon arrival at P.H.S., Tommy decided that he had to clue Tina in on the juicy gossip regarding ISS and attend three meetings at lunch. Also, he had to complete a Calculus "Take-home" test. Tina had promised herself that she'd apply for scholarships and learn how to crimp her hair without getting the frizzies. However, students weren't the only ones who dragged their semi-comatose bodies out of bed to appear at Poway High. Teachers went through the same ordeal daily, and think, the average teacher will stay at P.H.S. for much longer than our 4 years. One thing that kept these teachers ready and willing was the never-ending challenges present in the classrooms. With these in mind, the teachers drove to school eager to teach and to gain one new listener per day. This, believe it or not, formulates what turns out to be an average day at Poway High School.

IN YOUR WORDS: Why Do You Come to School?

— It's an environmental atmosphere and if I slept in it all of the time, I'd be insecure about what I missed. — Robb Abramson

— To see Greg Warden, Sven Crone, and Scott McMahon. — Anonymous

— I have a trained car? I really do enjoy my work . . . but the only really logical reason to go into education is . . . for the money. Besides we have not yet become accustomed to enforced anorexia.

Last Thought

by Sarah Massengill

After graduation, as we, the students of Poway High School, continue to progress, entering and graduating from college or getting that most-wanted new job, we will always hold within us the influences gained from attending P.H.S. We really acquired more than we thought from various groups of surfers (dude!), the Tommy Titans (rah, rah!), and the myriad of other students. Also, who can ever forget hearing Mr. Torreto's voice on the first day of school, or our first detention? All of these things, even though we thought differently during our high school days, really had an impact on our lives.

Included in the memories are our friends, the sayings (We've got the spirit, yes we do . . "), the photos from the many school dances, and the yearbooks filled with messages from old loves or your favorite teachers. Basically, after we have completed our education at P.H.S., we'll all have tried to erase from memory some of the bad times (tardies, ISS, strict campus patrollers and homework). Still, we'll find that the positive influences, from both the good and the bad, will continue to shine on in our lives. Just think, what would the world be like now if there were no such things as football games, clubs, freshmen P.E. class, Driver's Ed., S.A.T. tests, or applications of any kind.

Seniors

"I remember the class of '88 as freshmen. When I look into their eyes now, I see all the experience through the years in them." — Kathy Grasberger

We're Out Of Here!

"Who said our senior year was a breeze?!," exclaimed Porsche Melendez, as she pulled out her hair in a clenched fist. Many seniors were found frustrated with college preparations in the earlier part of their year. Most of us found out that we were mislead by the motto, "Oh, your senior year is going to be easy! You can just kick back and relax!" We found this to be quite the opposite.

As the year quickly closed in on us, we were all reluctant to leave our secure surroundings of the school that had been ours for four years. As Cindy Mackauf closed, "I kept on saying that I couldn't wait to get out of here! But then everyone came back at me with, 'Enjoy it while you can — it will all too soon be just memories.' "

Julie Mayers and Julie Hommel avoid the afternoon traffic due to their five-period schedule.

Working Together

by Anaelisa Romero

"Our major goal for this past year was when the class of 1988 left, that it was the best and that every activity was a great success," exclaimed Brady Hamilton. With the work of Brady Hamilton, President, Kristin Obenchain, Vice-President, Teri Miley, Secretary, and Heather McLeod, Treasurer, many Seniors will have fond memories of their last year at Poway High.

Even with some setbacks, the Senior class still excelled in their plans. Despite the surprise of the last place position won with their Homecoming float, some spirits were still high, "We the students spent so much time and effort on the float that it was the best float ever," stated Kristin Obenchain.

"We appreciated all the support we received from the class. They had a lot of spirit and energy. The class definitely had a certain character," said Brady Hamilton.

One teacher that Seniors will not forget is their advisor Champ. According to Kristin Obenchain, "Champ has always been supportive through the years. All the kids knew and loved him."

With all the hard work and dedication from the Senior class officers, The Class of '88 had a memorable and energetic Senior year.

"This was our last year for the class of 88 to be together. Hope that we never forget the good times we shared," stated Teri Miley.

The Senior class officers show that they can have fun and work hard planning activities.

Polite and well-rounded are some ways to describe "Most Likely to Take Home to Mom and Dad." Obviously the class of '88 thought Jennifer Gordon and Billy Wraith fit this description perfectly. When Jennifer was asked why she thought she had won this category, she replied, "I dress conservatively. I am friendly and I am outgoing. But also, I smile a lot, and I am easy to converse with," while Billy Wraith thought that he had won because, "I am the ASB President and I think I show good leadership qualities."

Being voted "Most Likely to Take Home to Mom and Dad" could mean that both Jennifer and Billy are good influences on their friends. But, Jennifer replied, "I think my friends influence me more than I influence them. I wish that I could say the opposite. But overall I think that I could play the role of the "All-American girl." Billy commented, "I think that both my friends and I influence each other. I may not be the "All-American boy" but, I feel that I may be considered so by some people."

Beth Jennifer and Billy were involved with school activities. Jennifer was a JV Cheerleader and Billy was a Varsity Baseball player and ASB President. With the involvement in such school activities Jennifer and Billy's well-executed behavior, made Poway High School a more pleasant place to be.

With conservative looks and well-bred manners Billy and Jennifer will always fit the category of "Most Likely to Take Home to Mom and Dad.

Future Record Setters

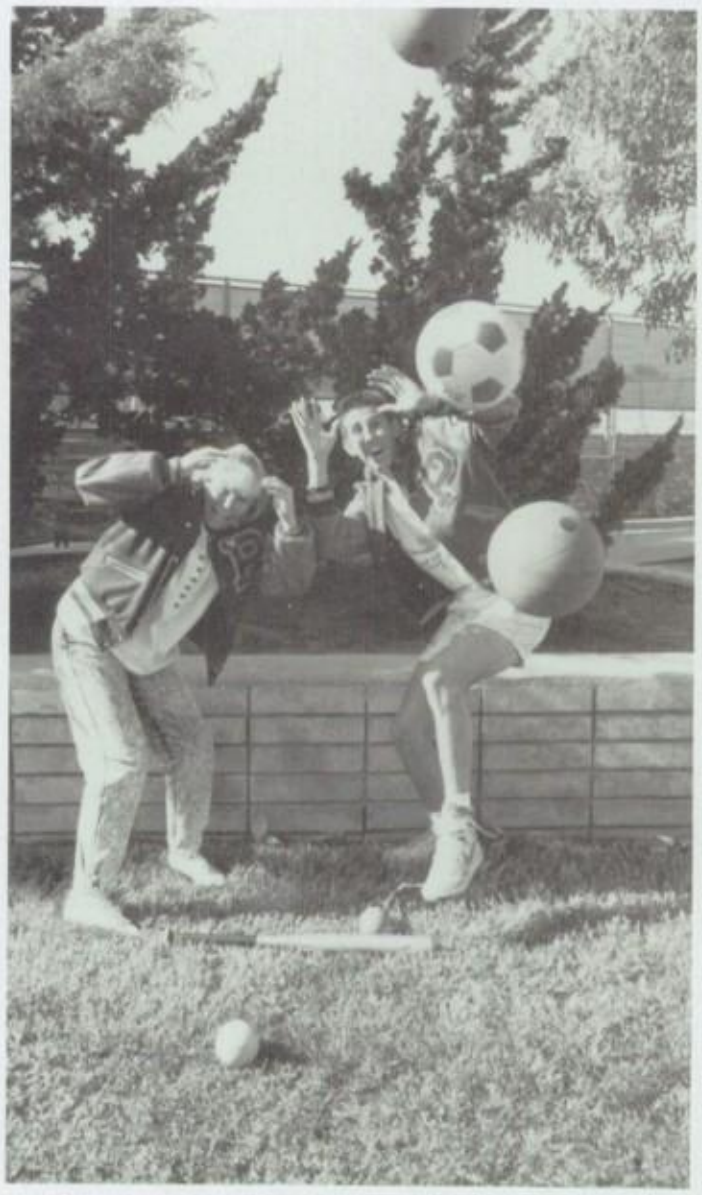
by Naomi Kusano

"With so many other talented and dedicated athletes here at PHS, I was surprised to have been recognized," expressed Charry Korgel, "I feel very honored." Although there were many fine athletes, Dave Delaney and Charry Korgel obviously stood out from the others. "I always gave 100% of myself whenever I competed," explained Dave.

Sports has always been an important part of Dave and Charry's lives, being involved with it "ever since I could kick, catch, or throw a ball," commented Charry. Both athletes were heavily involved in sports even in junior high school, from Charry being in cross country to Dave being in football.

However, in high school, Dave chose to participate in basketball and volleyball, while Charry chose volleyball, soccer, and track. She was named MVP for her hard work and dedication.

Sports will continue to be the center of their lives, as Charry commented, "In the future, I hope to make the National and Olympic soccer teams. With the skills and determination that she has, she could definitely make it happen. While Dave Delaney laughed and joked, "I just hope to get a free ride to college!" More on the serious side, he really summed up his feelings on it by stating, "When it comes to sports, there aren't many other things that I'd rather be doing."



The "Killer Balls" decide to take revenge and attack Korgel and Delaney.

Friendly Attitudes

by Naomi Kusano

A positive attitude, orginality, and caring are just some of the wonderful traits characterized by Tina Darby and Ross Furukawa. "I am very grateful that the class of '88 selected me for having the best personality. I appreciate it and feel very privileged," said Tina excitedly. Ross agreed and added, "I was really 'stoked' when I found out about it." Both Ross and Tina were found around the campus always talking with friends and just having fun. Tina defined a good personality as being, "understanding, loyal to friends, caring, being patient, accepting, and loving." While Ross defined a good personality as, "having a positive attitude, giving feedback to your friends, and having a good time."

Ross also gave up part of his time to help other students by being a peer counselor. "It was a really rewarding experience being able to help others with their problems," expressed Ross. Dedication like this proved how much he deserved to win this award.

Tina also added, "We all have our own special traits and attitudes which are enjoyed by others. We shouldn't change ourselves just to please others. People have to accept us for who we are and not for what they want us to be."

Tommy Hsiu closed by adding, "There are infinite possibilities in life. That is not the problem. The trick lies in being able to seize the opportunities you want, and to go after it."

Ross and Tina's personalities shine through their friendly smiles.

Hard working Seniors

by Naomi Kusano

Tommy wishes on becoming a wizard.

"Great teachers, parental support and hard work were the three things that were needed to do well in school," explained Thomas Hsiu, "I was very blessed with good teachers and supportive parents. These were my gifts. The sweat was my own."

Certainly, Tommy Hsiu and Jenny Coon deserved recognition for their hard work and dedication. When asked why she thought she had won, Jenny answered, "Because I worked hard in school and took challenging classes." As for future plans about her career, Jenny joked by commenting, "I'll work anywhere but at Baskin Robbins!"

They're So Unusual

by Anaelisa Romero

Bizarre can be defined differently by many people, but when Rob Abramson was asked why he thought he was considered bizarre, he replied, "I feel this category should be called "least understood," because when you aren't understood, people call you weird or bizarre."

When it comes to originality, these winners don't see themselves as too original. "I'm just as original as anyone else. I see something I dig, and I wear it," commented Rob. Knikki Royster replied, "I don't consider myself original, but definitely unique!" "If folks look at me twice and laugh, it makes me happy no matter if they are laughing at me or with me, because the point is they're laughing or scolding. But what I think it does is provide a change in the outlook towards society," commented Rob.

. . . It's How You Look

by Anaelisa Romero

Fashion may mean different things to different people. But, to the class of '88, fashion is Michelle Downey and Flynn Jones. Even the two winners have different views on fashion. According to Flynn Jones, "I don't consider my wardrobe different, but I feel I stand out." Michelle Downey expressed a different outlook, "I think fashion is fun. I try to buy clothes that I know other people won't wear, because it's not fun wearing the same outfit as someone else. Everyone has their own "look."

"I feel your first impression on someone is your appearance, and that is where fashion comes in," commented Flynn Jones.

But where to find these two fashionable people shopping for the latest looks? When asked, Flynn said, "I shop all over. I don't limit myself to department stores. I feel the basis of being unique is having an open enough mind to shop anywhere. I buy most of my clothes at small boutiques." Michelle simply said, "I shop for my clothes at Nordstroms."

With shopping playing the major role in being fashionable Michelle expressed her view on shopping as, "Shopping is my sport, hobby and reason for living. I also view it as a fun habit. Instead of hurting you like alcoholism or a drug addiction, shopping rewards with a new outfit."

Michelle Downey and Flynn Jones model their unique style in fashion.

Mister and Miss Spirit

by Naomi Kusano

Geoff's unique personality makes him naturally spirited.

"Who is that girl in the make-up and the wig cheering on the football team?!," someone in the bleachers asked. Why, that's Kris Rudzinski, one of the most spirited people here at PHS. Kris and ASB's Commissioner for Publicity, Geoff Johnston sure showed a lot of spirit and support for the Titan athletes and during the pep rallies this year.

"High school only comes around once and I wanted to make it the best," commented Kris. "Besides, I'm proud of the gift that God gave me with my vocal chords!"

Why was Geoff Johnston so spirited? "I've discovered that people who always smile and have positive attitudes are a lot more pleasant to be with than those who are negative," he explained. "I tried to bring out the side of people that were willing to open up and have fun, regardless of what their peers may have thought of it. People are just afraid to be different, so someone had to do it." Geoff was also given the opportunity to lead the pep rallies and class competitions with his cheerful and enthusiastic commentaries.

"Being spirited is fun," added Kris, "You can yell with friends and laugh and just have a great time, as well as support your team." And did she consider herself spirited? "Yes, anyone who wore a wig and didn't care what others said or thought must be a true spirited Titan!"

"Being spirited is a natural high." — Kris.

Make Me Laugh

by Anaelisa Romero

"I feel that if someone is really bummed then I will try to be funny. Anything to make someone laugh. See people make the most hilarious faces when they laugh. Their noses crinkle up and their eyes disappear, and they make funny noises trying to breathe, I love it!" commented Tiffany Schafer.

The Class of '88 definitely found Danny Leavitt and Tiffany Schafer humorous. Both Danny and Tiffany enjoyed making people laugh. "Ever since birth I've been considered funny. (But looks aren't everything)." joked Danny. "Well, when I was a toddler I was considered a ham, when I was in junior high I was a goof-off. I've always been considered funny." remarked Tiffany.

The Future is Outrageous

by Anaelisa Romero

It's obvious that the Class of '88 recognized and admired Outrages' unique and specialized talent. The class unanimously voted outrage as "Most Likely to Become Famous." When the band first started out, their goal was simply to write, make, and produce their own album, and now that has been accomplished. Fame was just another step to be taken in the band's future. "Success is the dream we share, and our friendship can only take us there as far as we can reach. This band has really come to life, now with our own sound, a step ahead from our past and the key to success and fame. I only want you all to sing along," commented Aaron McKay.

Lending a Helping Hand

by Anaelisa Romero

In the 80's teenagers faced many problems, whether it was grades, relationships with friends and family or peer pressure. With such concerns it helped to have someone your own age to talk to. Some people to talk with were peer counselors. One peer counselor stood out from the rest. This was Tracy Huntington.

The peer counselors didn't just talk to students, but supported them and worked with their peers. "We tutored people that were having trouble with their classes. We showed new students around and got them familiar with the school and the people there. A few of us worked with some very special students that others saw as handicapped, but we saw them as unique individuals. We counseled students with drug-related problems, family and school problems, those that had problems in relationships, and those that had problems with themselves. We helped students to find and look carefully at all their options, then we tried to support them in their decision. Above all we were there for those students who just needed someone to talk to," explained Tracy.

With Tracy's hard work as a peer counselor, she encouraged anyone that cared about other people to get involved with the peer counseling program. "Don't ever not have enough time to help someone, for one day they might not have enough time to help you," commented Tracy Huntington.

Tracy Huntington offers counseling to students and friendship as well.

Mirror Mirror on the Wall . . .

by Anaelisa Romero

Modesty, was certainly found in Mike Napierala and Carrie Gelwix. Being voted "Best Looking" did not change these two attitudes one bit. When asked how she felt when she found out that she had won for "Best Looking," Carrie Gelwix replied, "Excited, but I wondered why I was the lucky one." When Mike was asked he commented, "I don't think I really reacted towards it. It was just never expected. It took me by surprise. I suppose that I was lucky. I've never won anything for my looks before."

With being good looking naturally comes peoples' comments. "At some time people may have commented on my looks, but the thought of winning this category never occurred to me," stated Carrie. Mike replied, "I can't really say that people tell me that I'm good looking often, but I sure have been told it before."

"Beauty comes from the inside. Being good looking does not make people like you any better, nor will it help you throughout your future," added Carrie.

Porsche Melendez summed it up by saying, "Even though good looks have been bestowed on Mike and Carrie, on the inside their just as beautiful and down to earth!"

All Smiles

by Naomi Kusano

The Class of '88 found Greg Warden and Porsche Melendez to have the "Cutest Smiles." The two were often found smiling and talking with their friends. "Porsche was always so cheerful that she would put me in a good mood," commented Sara Paz.

"I have always been a happy person and I like expressing my happiness through my smile," explained Porsche. Throughout her high school career, many people have kidded her and joked about her "constant" smile. Some have even tried to see how long she could go without smiling.

As for Greg, his friendliness and good humor was noticed by many students throughout the school. Porsche and Greg will always be remembered for their genuine smiles!

High Goal Setters

by Naomi Kusano

"Success is in the eyes of the beholder. If you have accomplished your own personal goals and feel good about yourself, then that is the greatest success of all." Those were the wise words of a future successful accomplisher, Brady Hamilton. Along with Kristin Obenchain, the two seniors were noticed by their peers for having that hard-working, driving force that won them the title of "Most Likely to be Successful."

Having the honor of winning such a title has not put pressures on either of them. "I feel that I can fulfill this honor. I push myself very hard to fulfill my own high standards," expressed Kristin, "The only pressure I feel is from myself, wanting myself to succeed."

Brady and Kristin have shown participation and leadership qualities throughout their high school years. Both were officers for their senior class and Kristin gave some advice for the future seniors of Poway High, "Set your goals high and try your hardest to fulfill them. By doing this, you will win the respect of others and will feel good about the person that you are."

Brady Hamilton felt that success was a personal accomplishment. "It's my own determination and innerdrive that will help accomplish the goals that I've set for myself, to become the person that I've always dreamed to be."

Brady and Kristin, future entrepreneurs, enjoy their success and millions.

Shining Star at PHS

by Naomi Kusano

Signing autographs, cameras flashing, and being mobbed by fans. This may become part of Kristin McCarthy's life in the future. Winner of "Best in Drama," Kristin was very modest about the award, "I think there were many seniors in drama who were outstanding and deserved the award just as much."

Having no acting experience, Kristin got up the nerve to try out for her first play her freshman year and got the part. "When I was a freshman, I was too shy to take a drama class, so I took a tech. class instead," she confessed, "After I got over the initial fright of trying out in 'Guys and Dolls,' I decided to enroll in a drama class." She made the right choice, because she was a very good actress, and she has impressed many audiences with her acting.

An Aspiring Musician

by Naomi Kusano

If anyone deserved the award for "Best in music," it was definitely Stuart Holmes. Stuart has been playing the clarinet since fourth grade. Still, that is not the only reason. He not only plays the clarinet, but three other instruments as well — the flute, the saxophone, and the rhythm guitar.

The talented musician has always been interested in music and knew what he wanted to do. "Taking up on the clarinet was completely my own choice," explained Stuart, "my parents encouraged me once I made the decision, but I was never pushed into it. It was and still is understood that I could quit whenever I feel the need to." But that decision is highly doubtful.

In the past, Stuart has participated in both the Junior and Senior High School Honor Bands and Orchestras. He has also participated in the America's Youth in Concert 1985 European Tour. During junior high at Twin Peaks, Holmes participated in the Civic Youth Orchestra's Wind Ensemble, in addition to the normal school band.

"Sometime around sixth grade, I decided that music would be my career," admitted Stuart, "Since then, although I have many other interests, music has been my life and I wouldn't have it any other way."

Stuart Holmes proudly displays his instrumental talent.

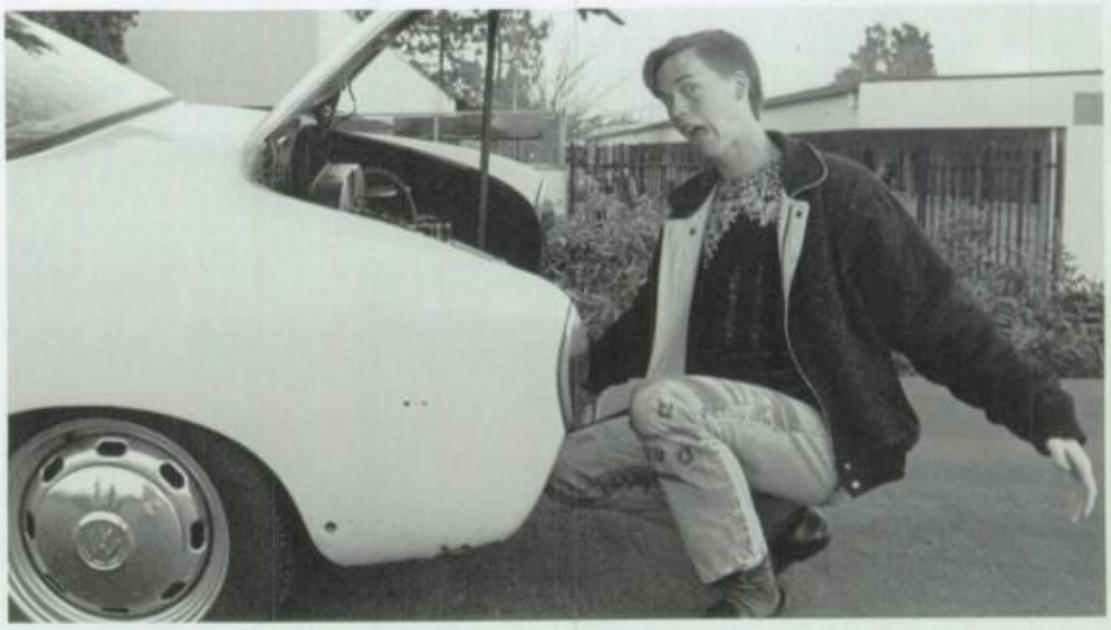
The Next Pythagoras

by Anaelisa Romero

Should the president of the Mu Alpha Theta club be outstanding in math? Whatever the answer was, Pete Secor had outstanding math skills. Pete was never the average math student. When he was a sophomore he took math analysis, as a junior Pete took calculus ab, and in his senior year he took calculus bc. With these challenging courses it was obvious that math was one of his favorite subjects. He also enjoyed English, biology, and chemistry.

Pete planned on acquiring an occupation that involves the application of math and physics. Math helped Pete in other aspects: "Working with my car, designing my stereo system, and getting into MIT," commented Pete.



"Math? I'll just work on my car," decided Pete Secor.

Class of 1988

by Naomi Kusano

"Over the four years, I've watched the class of 1988 mature and grow into an energetic group of individuals," expressed Bob Champion, the advisor for the senior class.

There seemed to be a lot of friendships and closeness that kept the class together. "This year was the first time that I really saw unity," commented Senior Class Secretary, Teri Miley. "Everyone got involved. They should have, after all, it was their senior year!"

As 1988 progressed, the Seniors might have taken on more responsibility if Senioritis hadn't prevented it. The class will return in ten years to reminisce about the annual "disease" and other memories that they will take with them into the future.

The Senior class enjoys the privilege they've waited four years to attain — THE SENIOR WALL.

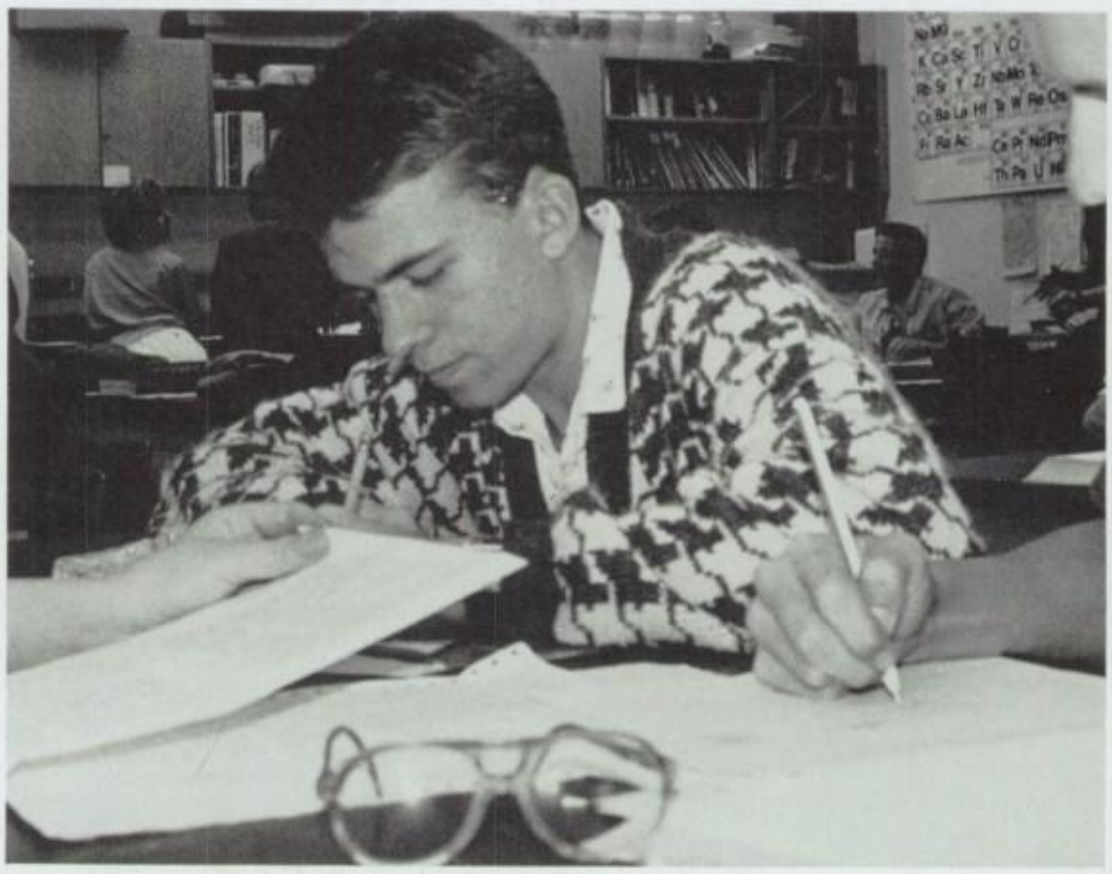
Man of Science

by Naomi Kusano

What are the "Laws of Thermodynamics?" The person to ask may be Todd Sallenbach, who was voted by the teachers as being "Outstanding in Science."

"I'm honored," expressed Todd, "It would not have been possible without the help of the faculty from the science department." He admitted that his teachers have influenced him throughout high school. "It wasn't one single teacher, but a combination of many good teachers. Those that come to mind first are Mrs. Lessard, Mr. Wymbs, and Mr. Schaitel. They've all helped me in achieving the goals I've set for myself."

As for his future, Todd plans to attend BYU or Stanford and major in either Biology or Business. He plans to pursue a profession in the medical field.



Todd puts the finishing touches on his lab.

"Champion" of the Year

by Naomi Kusano

The senior class of '88 found Bob Champion to be the perfect candidate for the "Champ of the Year" award. Known to most of us as "Champ," he brightened our days with his spirited attitude and friendly smile. "Champ is a nice and friendly teacher who also cares about his students," commented Angel DeChandt.

Champ led the senior class through many ups and downs. He watched us grow since our freshman year to being a diverse group of individuals. "He has stood by us and encouraged us to become the best person we can and to never give up," expressed Julie Mayers.

Champion was not only there to listen, but was also ready to go out and have fun with the class. Broom Hockey, Rock & Bowl, beach parties, and senior breakfasts were just some of the enjoyable activities that the class participated in. Although he was the adult supervisor during these activities, he fit right in, being a teen-ager at heart. As Mary Cruz added, "Champ is outgoing and fun — I guess that's why our senior class was great."

The senior class would like to thank Bob Champion for his time and dedication. We will all miss him after graduation, but will never forget his caring and understanding way. That is why we created this award especially for him — here's to the "Champ of the Year!"

Modes of Expression

by Anaelisa Romero

Strong adjectives, fascinating subjects, diverse plots, soothing poetry are different elements that bring on unique meanings to people is they read different types of literature. But as being The Most Outstanding English student out of the class of 88, Andy Bailey commented, "To me English is much more than just a means by which to communicate with those around you. It is more importantly a method of expression either through writing or the spoken word."

"I love to write. Writing allows me to write things on paper that I wouldn't dare say to somebody's face. All of the characters in my writings are hybrids of people I know. So if I ever get published, WATCH OUT!"

Andy was involved in the Iliad as the Entertainment Editor. "I really liked writing for the Iliad because it helped me become comfortable with writing to an even larger audience should I decide to tackle a novel or screenplay," replied Andy.

As for the future, "Hopefully my writing will help me make a living in the future. I just can't see myself drowning in tax shelters and mutual bonds. I'd rather read The National Enquirer," expressed Andy Bailey.

Andy Bailey expresses himself through his writing as well as his decor.

Growing Political Interest

by Anaelisa Romero

"I didn't expect it. It was never planned, but it is nice to be rewarded for my work," stated Peter Foster. What Peter Foster was talking about was when he first found out he was the Most Outstanding student in social science out of the class of 88.

Social science was Peter's favorite course. "It was the only subject that I was interested in. But civics was my favorite social science class. I enjoyed civics because it has something that relates to me, everyone and the entire nation," commented Peter.

"Everytime we deal with people, we deal with politics. If one studies and learns what makes politics work, they will also find out more about how people work. By having this knowledge of social science, one can achieve any goal by using peoples' social patterns and trends."

Peter Foster prepares for his future in politics.

Strokes of Creativity

by Anaelisa Romero

This last year proved to be an outstanding year for upcoming new artists. It was too great of a task to select one outstanding student in art so the top artists of the class of 1988 will be recognized.

The 1987-88 school year was a year in which talented female artists were more common than male artists. Mrs. Zacarias commented on these talented artists styles and attitudes. "Jennifer Dawson was fearless. She wasn't afraid to take on new subjects. Carolina Diaz had incredible patience in detail. Sheri Hartman was a superb horse artist. Cheryl Pitcher was a non-conformist. Wendi McHugh was a wonderful wacky sports artist. Kim Andrew was versatile and skillful. Heather Nguyen drew impressively. Erica Boatright was a good water-color artist. Lainie Morales had an artistic view point. Peggy Brodeau could tackle anything beautifully. Marni Chirico always did something interesting. Duana Coburn did fantastic abstracts. Dacia Cooper was a good water-color artist. Christine Turner had an imaginative strong style. Mart Rose Cruz could draw up a storm. Keiko Hirayama was an excellent artist. Shad Bradley did it all. Brian Wilson was a perfectionist. Andy Seidensticker was fast and good."

It would be no surprise if one or several of these talented artists have one or more pieces of their art work in one of the world's most renowned museums or on the cover of a famous art magazine. This year proved to be productive for the young artists of P.H.S. Their brilliance showed through in their creative works.

Underclass

"Getting good grades and fitting into the social scene were difficult, but in the end worth it." — Kathy Neri

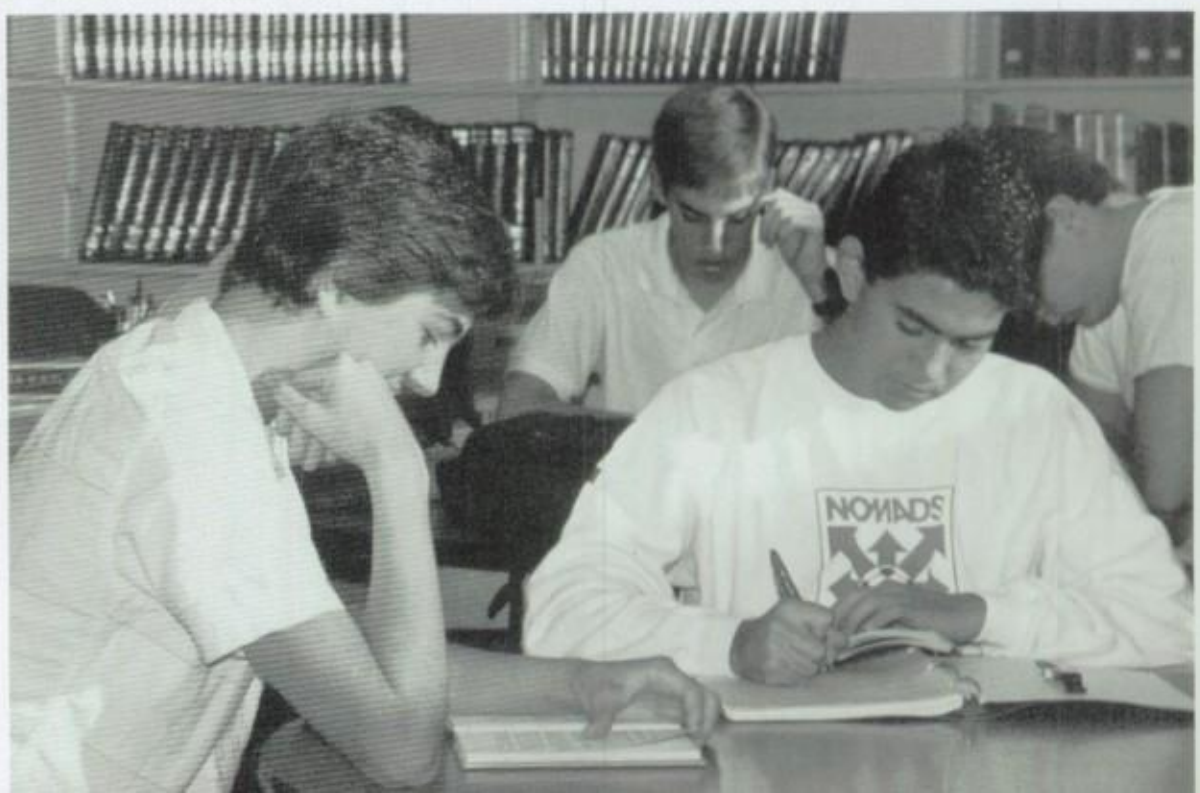
Out For Now

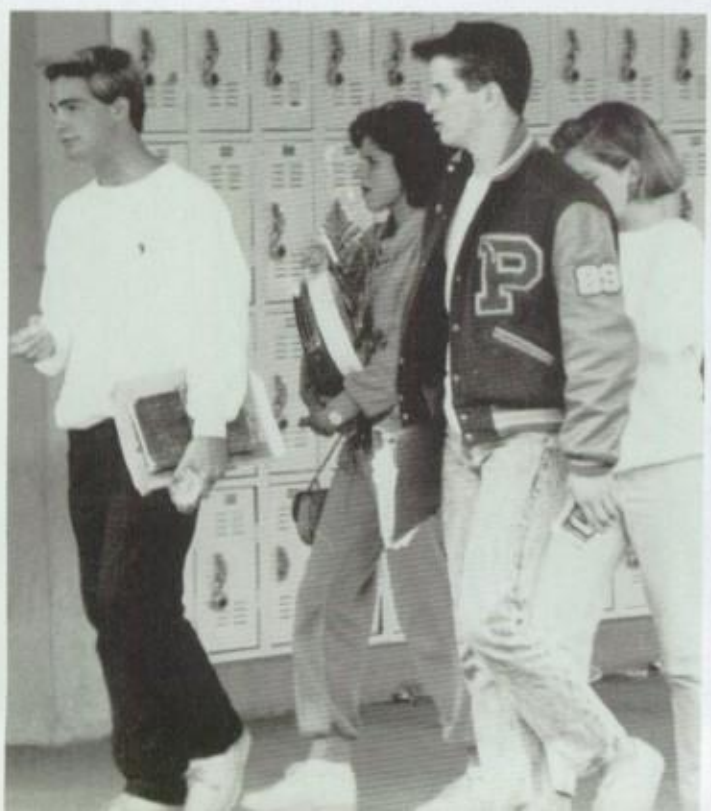
Every year the underclassmen advance in their path to becoming a senior. Juniors faced their toughest year ever while deciding what to do with their life. Sophomores spent more time studying, while the freshmen acquainted themselves with their new environment. Everyone awaited the arrival of June.

This year's juniors had to deal with the pressures of homework, social lives, and jobs, according to Kathy Neri. Even with the hard work, juniors could be seen at school, sporting events or on the town.

The sophomores were no longer dubbed as "freshmen" and began to take school more seriously. Closer to graduation, they began to think about their future.

Freshmen took a step as they faced obstacles such as the "freshmen reputation" and more work. Excited attitudes set them well on their way. Dedication made the underclass successful.





Zolton Petro and Eddie Paz study diligently in the library.

Underclassmen dig in and go for it in 1988.

Johnny Visconsi's underclassmen friends try to follow in his footsteps.

Officers Encounter Success

by Porsche Melendez

"The Junior class officers are a zany bunch of fun-loving kids, who really have their act together, leading the class of '89 to their best year ever," stated Mr. Weiss at the beginning of the school year. As class advisors Mr. Weiss and Mrs. Clark watched and supported the officers as they pulled together and planned out the upcoming year.

Every year, the officers have an overall goal they hope to achieve. This year, President Dave Baker stated, "Our main goal was to increase class spirit. I hope everyone feels we succeeded!" Throughout the year, the Juniors could be seen cheering their fellow classmates at the football games, and rallying with spirit at the many pep rallies. Their spirit also shone through at the judging of the Homecoming floats as the Junior class rapped their way to winning second place.

As they climbed their way to the top, the class of '89 encountered new changes in the traditional role of the Junior class. In the past, they had the challenging task of putting on the Junior-Senior Prom. As the biggest event of the year, it assumed a role of a "goodbye" present to the Senior class. Although the Prom was taken over by the ASB, the Juniors still planned on being a major part of it. The officers were successful in creating a year to be proud of.

ROP Gives Opportunity

by Christina Hubbert

"I didn't expect it to give me any opportunities or prepare me for anything." Quotes like this were made by many students enrolled in Regional Occupational Programs this year. ROP is designed to prepare students who plan to enter an occupation right after high school.

Being sixteen, many juniors filled part of their workload with ROP classes. These classes provided excellent training skills to students interested in a particular area of study.

The variety of ROP classes ranged from Animal Health to Fashion Merchandising. Classes like these gave juniors new ideas for future career opportunities, and the skills needed to obtain them. Shannon Chesterfield stated, "The class is preparing me in many ways. I am learning about the different fields of fashion and interviewing skills. On-the-job training teaches responsibility and maturity." While ROP classes provided students the skills to go right out into the job field, those who intended to go to college were greatly helped also.

With the wide variety of ROP classes offered, juniors found possible careers while learning many valuable lessons and skills. ROP gives the students hands on training in their field of interest. This goes to show that college is not necessarily needed to have a job which requires a particular skill. ROP provided classes where PHS students could incorporate their fields of interest into their and still have fun even with their heavy workload.

Juniors Plan Ahead

By Christina Hubbert

"I want to go to college to further my education so I can make it somewhere in this world being smart," stated Christina Klansnic.

In their junior year, students began to make important decisions about college and career goals. One way they did this was by listening and talking to various college representatives. Attending sessions in the Titan Center and North County College Night, they familiarized themselves with the school's campus life and atmosphere of the college. By looking through brochures college books in the Titan Center, they increased their knowledge about college and became aware of the many opportunities available to them by inquiring about the college of their choice.

With the help of college representatives that came to Poway High during the year, juniors enabled themselves to make important decisions about their future.

Commissioners Show Spirit

by Porsche Melendez

"Behind all great leaders are a few individuals giving them an extra hand." Not everyone can handle all the pressures of homework, sports, and jobs, as well as leading the junior class to success. As most of the pressure of school hit the officers, they realized they needed a little help to make the year a success. These individuals deserve as much credit as officers.

The Junior class commissioners are: Wendy Kevan — Activities Commissioner, Kevin Cook — Prom Commissioner, Diana Snodgrass — Publicity, Beth Decoteau — Activities, and Jennifer Lieber — Fund Raising. "By generating new ideas and taking charge of committees, the commissioners could help out the officers," stated Wendy Kevan. "If a person wants to be involved, they can be a helpful and productive member of the class." In addition to the academic aspect of their junior year, these individuals saw a need to get involved with their class, and create a lot of fond memories for their peers. They deserve a lot of credit and have proven that helping out and getting involved makes a difference between a "fun year" and a "fantastic year." This years commissioners were able to put forth a great effort and create and make the '87-'88 school year a one filled with fond memories.

You Know You're a Junior When . . .

by Christie Thibeault

"The Juniors had determination and free spirit!" exclaimed Lisa Appel in a proud manner. The Juniors were uniquely different from the Seniors, Sophomores, and Freshmen. They were no longer the low guys on the totem pole but weren't on the peak either. They were just stuck in the middle. They didn't quite have the prestige of the Seniors, but didn't get stuck with the reputation of "lowly Freshmen."

Adrianne Jonson expressed her views of the juniors class as, "My favorite are the Juniors who have to work their tails off to achieve greatness in this school."

The Juniors felt they were unique because they felt they had the most spirit at Poway High. The Juniors were proud of who they were, they didn't really want to be anyone else. They boasted their great achievement of placing second in the Homecoming Float Competition, especially since the Seniors got last place.

The Juniors felt that their third year in high school has a reputation of being the most challenging in their high school career. Even though their year proved to be challenging they didn't let the pressure get them down. They rose above it and let their spirit shine through.

Erin McCormack stated in a boastful voice, "We are the best! We have the most spirit." The Juniors proudly walked around campus, not fearing a confrontation with a Senior. "Who cares what the other classes think, we are the Juniors!"

The Big Countdown

Christie Thibeault

"I can't wait to be a senior! It's what we have been looking forward to, graduation," expressed a smiling Danielle Pagnini. The Juniors slowly but methodically moved upon and claimed the senior wall theirs at the end of the '88 school year. They never tried to establish dominance over the Seniors, but made it clear to the Freshmen and Sophomores that they would be the big guys on campus next year.

The Juniors had to work extremely hard at controlling their excitement of almost being seniors. Ricki Farrer exclaimed, "I am more than excited!" Adrianne Jonson expressed herself a little different. "It'll be a cool cruise year."

The 1988 school year drew to a close, and you could feel the excitement in the air around you. The Juniors waited for the bell to chime on the final day of school, when they could rightfully claim their titles as seniors and their very own Senior Wall. Erin McCormack exclaimed, "I can't wait! It's just hard to believe high school is going by so fast!"

Excelling Juniors

Christie Thibeault

Establishing academic excellence while contributing to the school and extracurricular activities are the proper ingredients for the making of a truly outstanding student. This year Bryan Huey and Teri O'Sullivan were selected by the teachers in a survey and named the outstanding Juniors of the 1987-1988 school year.

Teri O'Sullivan excelled in her Math Analysis and Writing Seminar classes, which she thoroughly enjoyed. Her Math Analysis class aimed her towards her goal of someday becoming an engineer. Teri participated in many school activities. She was Secretary of the Junior Class, a member of the Varsity Club, and she also belonged to the National Honor Society. While being active at PHS she maintained a 3.9 GPA.

Bryan Huey strategically organized his valuable time. He had three AP courses; Calculus, AP Chemistry, and German 7-8, and still maintained a 4.0 GPA. He found time in his hectic life to participate in school activities. He was President of CSF, a member of the Key Club, in the German Club, in Mu Alpha Theta, and NHS. He was also an athlete participating in water polo and the swim team.

Teri O'Sullivan and Brian Huey agreed that, "Our junior year was challenging but will prepare us for college and our future."

Sophomore Officers Reach New Heights

by Porsche Melendez

As the Sophomore Class climbed the ladder of success, they were led by a few outstanding individuals. The officers of the Class of '90 devoted a lot of time and effort this year as they made their mark at PHS. This year's officers did an outstanding job. They all agreed that "Being friends before hand really made it easier. We all work well together and through leadership our friendship has grown."

President David Anet commented that he wanted to give something back to the sophomore class for working so hard and supporting them throughout the year. "One of our goals was to win the Homecoming Float competition. We were thrilled when this goal was achieved." Brian Gillespie commented, "I think being an officer is fun and I wanted to help out with the school. I had good ideas and wanted to put them to use." Sara Paz, sophomore class treasurer, added, "Leadership is very special to me, and I have made a lot of friends over the years by getting involved."

The Sophomore Class has changed a lot this year. From winning the float competition to promoting school spirit, they have led the way for future classes. Their organization and spirit emerged and David Anet concluded, "The class really came together and made our jobs easier."

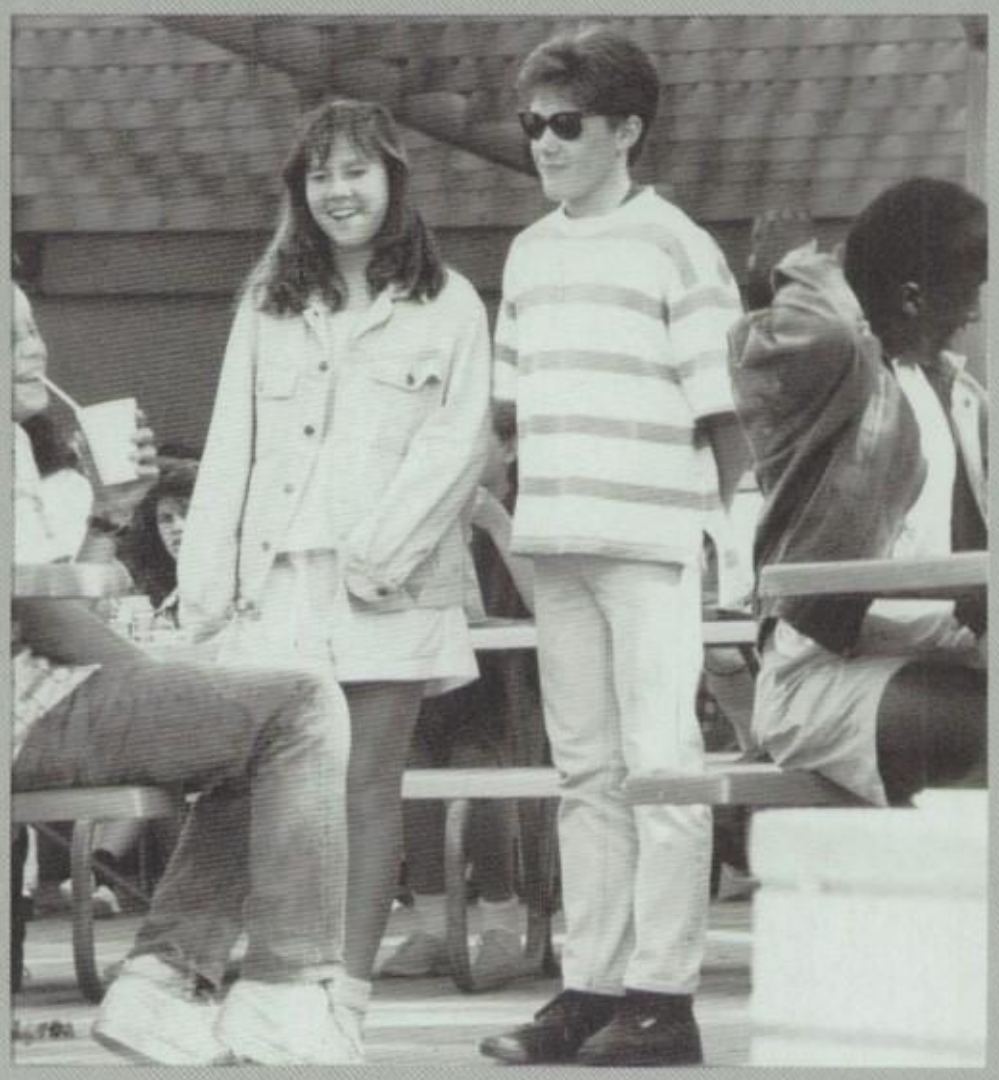
Shedding "Frosh" Title

by Christie Thibeault

"Like it's said, you have to earn respect," Rana Holgerson boastfully stated. That was exactly what the sophomores of 1988 did; they came back to PHS in the fall proud to be sophomores. They had a new attitude towards their life in high school. They were no longer the lowly freshmen. They were in tenth grade, and it was their turn to pick on the freshmen.

Jennifer LaRocque considered the privilege of being a sophomore and stated, "I like school a lot more now! The people judge me for what I am and not because I am just a stupid freshman." The other students were able to look inside the person and like him for who he was not because he was just a freshman.

The sophomores didn't have to walk into school anymore afraid of what was going to happen to some unlucky freshman. Instead, they could walk into PHS proud of themselves for living through their freshman year and all of the nightmares that accompanied their first year of high school. Being a freshman wasn't so bad, but being a sophomore was a whole lot better. David Anet said as sophomores, "We fit in more and feel much more relaxed and at home."



Sophomores achieve "cool" status as they leave freshman rank.

Sophomores Excel Academically

by Christina Hubbert

To be a successful student, one must be strong academically and involve themselves in school and extra-curricular activities. This year, David Anet and Marci Baker were chosen by teachers and selected as the Most Outstanding Sophomores for 1988.

Marci Baker proved to be an excellent student and writer this past year. Taking such classes as Hon. Comp 2 and French 3-4, she maintained a GPA of 3.3 and found time to participate in activities such as the tennis team. Writers Anonymous and volunteer for the ASB. These activities will help in her future plans to obtain a career in communications and radio or tv writing.

David Anet attended difficult classes such as Algebra 3-4, Hon. Comp 2 and Spanish 5-6. In addition to his tough workload, he managed to take part in the tennis team, SADD, Interact, peer-counseling, and a member of the site council. David also held down the office of the sophomore class president.

Both Marci and David proved that going to school doesn't mean one can't involve themselves in other activities. David summed it up by saying, "school isn't only a place to work, it's also a place to enjoy yourself by getting involved in activities."

Marci Baker and David Anet show how brilliant they really are.

Sophomores Stand Out

by Christina Hubbert

Just out of their freshman year, it seems that Sophomores tended to involve themselves more in school and they wanted to be different. This year was no different. Sophomores were determined to be noticed this year. They engaged themselves in actions that made them stand out from all of the other classes. One quality that made them stand out from the other classes, was their new sense of freedom. "When we were freshmen we always had someone by our sides because we felt threatened by the new environment that we were in," stated Kathi Thompson, "but now as sophomores we're becoming individuals and don't need our friends with us at all times." Class cliques were no longer necessary in order for them to be noticed by the other classes. Instead the sophomores used their bright, sunny, and cheerful dispositions to receive the recognition of the other classes.

As the sophomores ascended from their lowly place as freshmen, they brought along with them ideas and qualities that made them unique. Sara Paz said, "Sophomores have a little bit of junior high left in them, so they are experienced and yet fresh and different at the same time."

Mike Pedrotti leads the herd of sophomores to their morning class.

Gaining Freedom and Respect

Porsche Melendez

As Freshmen grew older and advanced to the new sophomore title, they gained new freedoms and responsibilities, opening the doors to new experiences. Sophomores didn't have to rely on "Mommy and Daddy" to taxi them around, and restricting curfews were sometimes extended to allow more time to "have fun". Parents began to realize that their darling children must grow up and they cut the strings which held them down.

Many sophomores agreed that driving was a great responsibility. "Driving allowed a greater sense of freedom," stated Jason Barrie, "our parents trust us to take care of the car, and allow us to venture off on our own." Chris Cowman also stated, "You should always be responsible, but when you drive, you need to take responsibility for yourself, as well as those who you are driving." It was a good feeling to see the Sophomores taking charge of their lives and being responsible for their actions. Many parents could then remain calm when their kids asked for the car keys and told them they would be out late. As for having more freedom, Chris Cowman added, "Not really. I still have the same exact privileges that my parents gave me last year."

Dean Antibus is proud to be recognized as a responsible Sophomore.

New Officers Bring Fresh Ideas

by Christina Thibeault

"I like to work with a team, make long lasting friendships, and what I like most about being a class officer is the fun," said V.P. of the freshmen class, Ryan Ramos. The freshmen officers had a big hurdle they needed to jump, and that was coming to P.H.S. proud to be freshmen.

The class officers hoped to increase spirit and unite their class. Jason Hill President of the freshman class said, "I want to make my class have the best four years of their lives." They wanted to give their classmates great memories that they would always keep.

The freshmen went around school trying to act sophisticated and not let on their true identity. Megan Kendrick, freshman secretary stated, "I wanted to make the freshmen get involved and not be scared of who they were." The officers knew that they probably couldn't do anything to change how the upper classmen felt about the freshmen, but, they could probably change the way the freshmen felt about themselves.

Bill Decker, freshman treasurer said, "It takes a lot of responsibility to help raise money and make more activities for the freshman class." The freshman class officers worked very hard and dedicated many long hours to make the 1988 school year a year the freshmen would remember.

Bill Decker and Megan Kendrick show their vibrant attitudes towards representing the freshmen class.

Reaching New Heights Striving for the Top

by Christina Thibeault

Jumping from junior high to high school is a big step. The freshmen of 1988 were immersed into a whole new environment, something which was completely different from anything they had been exposed to before. Jason Klein and laura Tomlinson overcame the obstacles of being freshmen, and forged ahead taking advantage of the situation.

Laura Tomlinson had a G.P.A. of 3.70 and aimed herself in the directions of a career as a doctor or nurse. Laura became actively involved in band and her church's youth group. When commenting on Poway High School, Laura said, "It's the people and activities which I like best. This helps to create a positive learning atmosphere.

Jason Klein dedicated many long hours to P.H.S. as a freshman. He played on the freshman basketball team and was actively involved in the Ski Club. While doing all of this he still managed to maintain a 3.90 G.P.A. "I hope to incorporate my experiences on the basketball team and my success in school into someday becoming a sports caster."

Both Laura Tomlinson and Jason Klein deserve the award of Most Outstanding Freshmen because of the dedication and hard work they put into 1988.

Laura Tomlinson and Jason Klein show off their superior knowledge in all subjects.

Freshmen Take A Stand

by Christina Hubbert

Adapting to a brand new environment and being the youngest took a lot of patience, but this year's freshmen seemed to have no problem adjusting to the changes of their new life.

Trying to transform into a more mature person was difficult, but not impossible. Although, according to Dona DeMarco, "We're more outrageous than the others because we haven't calmed down yet." Their outgoing attitude gave them a great amount of spirit and acknowledgement at football games and during class competitions. Always being active and laughing got them noticed by the others, too. Everyday, their pride of being freshmen could be seen in the halls by living it up and having a good time.

The many qualities possessed by the freshmen class this year presented a positive attitude for themselves, and those to come. Their pride gave them the courage to be themselves and when their true personalities shone through, others liked them for who they really were. Christe Shillato summed it up best by saying, "Don't be ashamed of being a freshmen. Everyone has to go through it." With this attitude, the freshmen were ready for success!

A Big Step for Freshmen

by Porsche Melendez

Dawn Namlik

Uyen Ngo

Freshmen, having just taken the big step into high school, have found a whole new way of life at the top. Being the youngest members of PHS, they have come to see that one may easily get lost amongst the 3,000 students. They were also bombarded with homework and tests.

Welcome to PHS! No one was more anxious or nervous than the freshmen class on the first day of school. You could always single out a freshman by catching them in the act of sneaking a peek at the famous PHS map. Alison Grove commented, "Campus life is very interesting and fun but it is tough to get around with so many people." Although everything seemed to increase in size, from the amount of homework to the number of students, Andrea Lassiter seemed to feel that since she was in high school, she has more freedom. The class of '92 has been put to the test as this year's Frosh Class. They have really pulled together and shown a lot of spirit. Jenny Domville stated, "The freshmen were nice and proved to be successful as they showed their class spirit by selling Blo-Pops as a fund-raiser." As we welcomed the new "babies" of PHS, we had one thing to say, "This is what high school is all about."

Athletics

"Sports at PHS is like an academy award winning movie: At year's end, the walls on the gym are littered with our new banners. It's just gotten outta control."
— Gary Brad-

Out of Bounds

Hundreds of students participated in this year's athletic program. But unlike other years, the competitive level rose making the selection more refined. With the incline of student population, rivalry between students for team positions climaxed.

Many other changes took place as well. The newly-created track provided higher quality surface for athletes to utilize. However, the size of the football/soccer field shrunk in size.

Athletes strove to be their best and focused on working as a team. By doing so, the teams gained victories and rose to the challenge of CIF competition. This year showed that athletes can push themselves beyond their expected limits; therefore, leading themselves out of bounds.

Fighting to the End

By Molly Smith

Soaring through the air, the football landed directly in the hands of a Titan receiver. The roaring fans cheered as his agile feet raced towards the goal line. This scene resembles a play at any one of the victorious games during the season. "We never let up or were negative to one another," Doug Schwenke remarked, "We were just a few plays away from CIF."

The Titans were the smallest team in the league so it was necessary to work together. Through the season they gradually gained respect from the community and opposing schools. Confidence guided them through the entire season and enabled their potential to be recognized.

Quarterback Mike Beam led the team to a record of 5 wins, 4 losses, and 1 tie. This included a memorable victory against Orange Glen. "We played tough as a team and with so many players coming back, we should be one of the powers in the league," commented Dave McClain.

Greg Warden, awarded most valuable player for defense and team replied, "Best of luck next year fellows!"

Striving Beyond

By Molly Smith and Paige Smith

"We took each game one step at a time, and always looked at the next with a positive attitude," explained Jason Barrie. The spirit, pride and confidence behind the 1987 J.V. Football team took them beyond obstacles, and into tougher competition. Most could agree that defeating both Mt. Carmel and Vista were the high-points of their season. The personality which this year's team attained, allowed them to be successful with a new offense, while still maintaining their strong defense. The high caliber athletes is only making the success of the P.H.S. Football Program increase. Jon Stephani expressed, "We have talent that has not yet been awakened." With the potential they possess, the JV Titans are looking forward to next year, and the gassers, with much anticipation, and confidence that they will be on top. Mike Pedrotti felt, "Next year will be our year to shine, and reveal our true potential." With this attitude we can be assured for a successful year to come.

"Coach Torretto and I were fortunate to have such potential in our players," remarked assistant Coach Welch. The players all expressed fresh attitudes, striving toward their full capability. Gassers and ups and downs left the team gasping for breath, however, the price of daily practice proved beneficial. Their overall conditioning towered above any other team they competed against. The entire team united to create an excellent group of athletes. They dedicated themselves to improving, and confidence led them to the field.

Although all of their victories proved to be special, the game against Fallbrook stands out as a momentous occasion. The final score revealed Poway triumphant.

Freshmen flair kept their spirits high, enabling them to perform skillfully during the season. "We improve in each new game and are ready to tackle the upcoming year," commented CW Page. They look forward to shedding their freshmen uniforms and playing Junior Varsity ball.

Varsity Unifies

by Jeffrey Stahlhut

"High school sports is more than just athletics; it's friendship and good times," this quote from Lynell Stokes really reached the heart of this year's Varsity volleyball team, a team that came together from a bunch of individuals to form an on-the-court family.

Led by "the Seniors" the team produced an outstanding year with an excellent future. "This year's team was very unusual," stated coach Sarver and with superstitions like "WSKA shirts, Green Dots and ribbons," and activities like T-Ping the coach's house and singing songs during bus rides, the team definitely was not ordinary. The team also found time for sewing their own game shorts and slumber parties. The girls were not all fun and games though, academically speaking they had eight scholar athletes and compiled a 3.5 G.P.A. They also excelled on court with a 9-3 league record and a semi-final appearance at C.I.F. Coach Sarver summed it up best when she said, "They really lived up to their expectations and accomplished a lot."

Those expectations often meant hard work and tough practices, but according to Christie Hoover, "This was the most united team we've had and it made practices and things easier," and those tough practices really paid off.

Reaching For The Stars

By Paige Smith

"We looked forward to every game and every opportunity to reach for the stars and grasp our goals," commented Heather Burke. The stars were only the beginning. Poway's Junior Varsity Volleyball team spelled their season with success, at the top of the J.V. ladder, and making their mark among the Varsity competition.

The suicides, push-ups, and hard work paid off. For the second time in a row, the Mean Green Titan Machine finished with an undefeated season. Coach Cooper attributed their success to the fact, "The team had high expectations, worked together, and wouldn't die. They didn't know what defeat was." "We were confident, competitive, and invincible. Losing didn't cross our minds," recalled team captain Dawn Gigstad.

Capturing the Palomar title, and finding themselves among the top at the Hilltop Varsity Tournament, Denise Hoover captured their essence by expressing, "We worked hard in practice and proved it on the court." By pulling together, they proved that there was nothing beyond their reach.

A Smashing Success

By Traci McClellan

"Big Mac-Molester attack," rang through the PHS tennis courts when Carol Mac Ilroy and Kim Hester played their doubles match. This year the Girls JV tennis showed their true colors by becoming a top-notch tennis team. Coach Parrinello stated that this year's tennis team was "much stronger because almost all the girls were returning players with only a few new faces added in." The tennis team proved its strength with a 16-1 record. Friendships developed as the players moved further into the season. Christine Hittle remarked, "We're like one big happy family, and we all get along really well." Most players respected Coach Parrinello's knowledge of tennis; therefore, they could take his suggestions and criticism without being offended. They also recognized that he had their best interests at heart. Lori Jackson added, "He's critical at times, but I guess that's what makes us so good." Not good, but great, best describes this year's JV tennis team. By the strength shown this year, the players who moved up to the Varsity level will continue to make the PHS Girls' Tennis team a success!

Dreams Come True

by Paige Smith

"It was a dream come true," commented Jennifer Lukenbill, "We set our goals and accomplished them." Grasping for their goals, they reached the stars. With the stars came the San Diego C.I.F. banner.

The success of the 1987 Girls Tennis Team can largely be attributed to their hard work, and team support. "We were like a family," reflected Leah Splavek, "We all supported and encouraged each other." The girls could often be seen picnicing together at lunch on the quad, wearing decorative boxer shorts, or practicing cheerleading mounts in order to fire-up for important matches.

Needless to say, this year's roster was filled with talent. Danielle Decosmo returned from Illinois, and PHS welcomed foreign exchange student Charlotte Skive, both of whom played a large part in capturing the championship title. Charlotte and Carla Quaresma teamed together to win the C.I.F. doubles crown, and attained All-C.I.F. laurels.

Poway also contributed six girls to round off the All-Palomar League team.

The three seniors, Deena Mueller, Jennifer Lukenbill and Danielle Decosmo, took their roles as team captains to keep the girls "fired-up" during pre-season physical testing and excited right up to when they read that Bonita Vista had lost. "Thats when we knew the title would be ours," remembered Carla Quaresma.

"We didn't really think about losing," said Leah Splavek, "We were always pretty confident." Their confidence, unity, and talent brought a feeling of accomplishment. Their success brought them respect throughout the county, and a special sense of pride that they were a part of the Elite.

"Everyone wanted to win," reflected Laura Newmark, "We worked well together." They were all full of encouragement for each other, and support which allowed them to survive the perils of tough competition.

As for next year, they will undoubtedly be victorious.

WATERPOLO

Working Together

by Traci McClellan

"Deep seated mutual respect," stated Coach Mark Miller, was the basis for this year's successful Varsity waterpolo team. The compatibility between players and coach became evident with their record — 18 wins and 6 losses — and two rounds of CIF play in which they placed fifth. Eric Wetzell, a goalie, expressed, "Coach Miller has had a great positive effect on my life." The team came together this year unlike years past where disjointedness and "ball-hogs" kept the team from functioning like a well-oiled machine. But this year, "their performance far surpassed my expectations," stated Coach Miller.

Challenging workouts also increased the team's strength. With the use of weight belts and sweats, players felt the conditioning aspect quite intensely. Brian Huey commented, "These workouts are super tough." Friendships played an important part in the success of the season. Keith Hanson stated, "We all get along really good and encourage one another." Not only in the pool, but outside the comradary continued.

Many changes were seen by the waterpolo team this year. A new score clock decorated the pool area, providing a more advanced look. Extra awards were given out to those truly hardworking players who are not always individually recognized. Some of the awards and recipients are as follows:

Most Valuable Player — Steve Ostrom
Hardest Worker Award — Steffan Pyle/ Eric Wetzell
Most Improved Player — David Hilbig
Most Inspirational Player — Aku Kaikkonen

Todd Kroepel summed up saying, "Sharing the victories with teammates made it all worthwhile." These players met the challenges set before them to become a strong team who really worked together.

It means more to have players respect you." And respect him they did. Through the friendships shared, Steve was well liked by all. Steve has enjoyed playing waterpolo and received many awards for his efforts. This year, he made the San Diego All-CIF Team 2nd Team and the Palomar Conference All-League 1st Team. He lead and encouraged his team to a very successful season. Steve said that he will continue to play in college because he really loves the sport. Good luck in all you do, Steve!

WATERPOLO

Flupp! Another Score!

By Traci McClellan

"Splashing through at their opponents, the JV waterpolo team showed they were a force to be reckoned with. The team showed their immense strength compared to last year with a 17-0 season. One of the keys to this success came with the new coach, Kathy McCoy. She stated, "I am very strict and expect discipline from these guys."That is exactly what she got too. The players worked hard — not only during the games but practice as well. All the players liked and respected their new coach and were not bothered a bit by the fact she was a woman. Rob Noel commented, "She is really cool and puts up with all our antics." Shawn Yamasaki added, "She's very easy to get along with and gives good, hard workouts."

As far as a high level of competition with other teams was concerned, this team did not have to sweat. Coach McCoy commented, "We're still waiting for some competition." This powerhouse team overcame any obstacle that faced them this year. When asked about how they compare to opponents, Jason Kroepel enthusiastically replied, "We dominate, I think we are #1," and they truly were.

"Frosh waterpolo, what do they know?" Despite their inexperience, the determination and efforts of this novice team paid off. This year's team pulled together to produce a young team willing to learn and compete at the high school level. Coach Dennis Moore stated, "I think the guys are really excited to be on waterpolo because they always want to get in the water." Jenee Carr, the only girl on the team, added, "It's a lot of fun, and it's different than other sports." It took the players awhile to get used to Coach Moore's style, but the coach stated that "it's getting better every week." Shawn Boyle commented, "He is a great coach who gives very hard workouts. It makes more pressure on us to play well and win." They rose to that challenge quite well. Their record, 15-1, showed they could work together like a winning team should. "Ballhogs" were not a problem during practice and games because of the team discipline and letting everyone has his try for a moment of glory when he made that perfect score. Many commented that they could not wait to play next year.

CROSS COUNTRY

Running Away

by Jeffrey Stahlhut

"Phenomenal," stated Bill Aronson when reflecting on the season for the boys Varsity cross country team. And that was exactly what it was: "They went after their goals and reached them," stated Coach Schaitel, and they did indeed. Not only did they finish undefeated in league play, but they captured the league and C.I.F. titles and a trip to Fresno's Woodward Park for the first-ever State Finals.

Led by Bryon Devore and emerging stars Bill Aronson and Eddie Paz, the team has started the newest Poway dynasty. The key reason for this success was "Depth." "Poway may have the best seven-man team in the state," added Bryon Devore. And with their exceptional talent he might be right. In fact Poway was so deep that their JV team was filled with runners easily capable of running Varsity at other schools. Another reason for the success Poway has gained in running has come from their experienced coach Dan Schaitel, who led last year's Boys track team to a C.I.F. championship.

With the depth and experience of the cross country team, the chances for the Dynasty to continue are overwhelming.

Racing Towards the Future

By Jeffrey Stahlhut

What makes runners run? Whether it is the challenge of competition, camaraderie, trying to be your best or having fun, the boys JV team has run away with the league title.

Running behind one of the best varsity teams is not an easy job. But the JV team took on and accomplished that task. They ran so well that their opponents could not place any runners ahead of their top five; this provided for a perfect season with an undefeated dual meet record and a third place finish at Mt. Sac, in addition to a third place finish at the Southern California Invitational Varisty Tournament. The main reason for the successful season was "depth, and balance," according to both Darrin Malloy and coach Schaitel. With a team with this much talent, their competition has a lot to worry about. Mike Opel summed it up best when he said, "We have an excellent future ahead of us."

"This season showed promise, so we can't wait for next year." This quote from Spencer Shewmake is an understatement of what the Freshman Cross Country team accomplished this year. In fact not only did they show promise, they finished undefeated and captured the first place title at the Mt. Sac Freshman Invitational competing against the top teams in California. They also took the Palomar League title.

"The success was largely due to a strong group performance and a balanced team," according to coach Schaitel. With excellent runners to look up to and to learn from, these Freshmen made a name for themselves. "They learned to be the best," added Schaitel. They leave a lot for Poway High Cross Country to look forward to in the future. Hopefully next year we can live up to the standards that we set this year," concluded Josh Brown.

Varsity Girls Unite with Pride and Friendship

by Molly Smith

Trudging through the usually rough, wild terrain course, the Girls Varsity Cross Country team devoted themselves to outstanding performances. They could frequently be seen gaining distance on the opposing teams. "The whole team strived as a unit," replied Sam Brown. Successful throughout the season, they depended on one another for support during their competitions. Every girl contributed to the accomplishments of the team.

Daily practice consisted of a rigorous program. Usually they encountered "switch-backs." These were a series of distances run back and forth on a designated course. Even with their difficult practices each day, they still maintained an average grade point of 3.7.

Together at least three nights a week, they shared in pasta parties, water balloon fights, and various practical jokes. For example, at the Fresno State Troop Meet they threw the coaches in the pool. "The titles and awards we won were important, but the friendships will stay with us forever," states Kathy Grassburger with a smile.

The friendships and strenuous practice produced an excellent group of athletes. Their character led them to many outstanding honors. They placed 6th in the state and had the 2nd best program in California.

With freshmen running for the Varsity team in the last season, next year they expect to do just as well. "I encourage runners to join," comments Dawn Gigstad.

Unity Yields Success

by Paige Smith

"Running brings people together," commented Melissa McCool, "It's like an unspoken bond." That unspoken bond brought the JV Girls Cross Country team to the top of the Palomar League, and concluded their season with a 9-1 record. A lot of their success was due to their unity and desire to work hard and support each other. They became more like a family and less like individual athletes. "I was impressed with their hard work and the way they worked together as a team," offered Coach Embry, "The unity carried outside of the team." Before meets, our lady Titans could often be seen singing songs together as they all tried to help break the tension before important races. As a team, they encouraged each other to do the best they could to benefit each other and the team. While being enthusiastic gave them an advantage, it was the strength of their talent that put them ahead of the rest. With such a well-rounded team, Poway is bound to be on top again next year. With such outstanding athletic programs, it is truly an honor to be recognized as exempliary. The hard work and individual talent allowed each of these athletes to lead his team and contribute to the prosperity of Poway High School Athletics while being named MVP.

Shining above the rest, Theresa Davis lead the Girls Cross Country team to their. C.I.F. crown. Theresa placed 12th in the Palomar League.

Greg Warden conquered the football field. Greg walked away with All-Palomar Defensive Player-of-the-Year, First team All-Palomar, and was voted Poway High Football MVP.

Jose Castro made his mark on the football field by being named to the Palomar All-League team.

SOCCER

Bouncing Back

by Jeffrey Stahlhut

"Swish," the familiar sound of a soccer ball hitting the back of the net, for another goal. This sound was hard to come by for this year's Varsity Soccer team. They soon found out how tough it was to defend a CIF title.

The largest problem was inexperience. After losing eight players to graduation and one to Mt. Carmel, they had very few returning starters. Wade Brannon stated, "this year's team was real young." And when you play in a league like the Palomar League it is easy to have a tough season. Both Mt. Carmel and San Dieguito were the stiffest competition, because they brought in the experience needed to win. Not all was bad for the Titans as they made a good showing in the preseason tournaments, in addition to some good games during the season, one in particular, the Ramona game where they played eighty flawless minutes and finished 1-0 winners.

"Champ faced many new adversities," stated Chris Weber, and if Champ can come back like he has in the past, we can expect brilliant teams in the future. Kevin Arthur and Marc Lipkin, two returning starters should provide Poway with the needed dominant players next year, and if they do the Boys Varsity Soccer team should have an excellent shot at regaining the coveted CIF crown.

Aiming for Goals

by Molly Smith

As winter rolled around, Espola Rd. became inhabited with the determined players of the Boys JV soccer team. Running 10 miles/week and doing tough drills like "doggies", may have been tedious but they really paid off. Some highlights that came from this exciting year were the capturing of the Poway JV Invitational and the pounding of their arch rival, Mt. Carmel.

A large reason for the teams success was the "unity", according to Mike Succi. He also added that "the team had no real superstar but played excellently together." After a tough season, the time spent really paid off with an outstanding record and with the valuable experience gained. With sensational plays, excellent coaching and a lot of hard work, the team finished with a great season. Brian Gillespie summed it up best when he said, "this is one of the best seasons that Poway has ever had at the J.V. level."

by Jeffrey Stahlhut

Scrambling across the soccer field, Poway's Frosh team expertly took control. At every glance, the ball seemed to be in their possession. Stamina enabled them to have a victorious attitude, intimidating opposing teams. Early in the season, Scott Coulter, once named player of the week stated, "We have remained undefeated thus far in the season and our goal is to win the league."

The entire team maintained a high level of energy and spirit while on and off the field. They anticipated each new game, thrived on the pressure of competition and success. One exercise that strengthened their playing techniques consisted of laying on their backs and imagining themselves on the field. Coach Martin would describe a perfect goal and the players concentrated on the way it would look and feel. This proved to be a successful technique, which allowed for improvements during games.

Season Nets Adversity

by Molly Smith

It all began in late November when eighteen girls were united and branded the Varsity Girls Soccer team by the decision of Coach Bradshaw. No one could foresee their imminent success or the friendships that would develop through the year.

"If the team wasn't as close, we wouldn't have made it," commented Michelle Poucher with a smile of pride. The Varsity team displayed the strongest bond of unity that has ever been shown in past seasons. "I learned a lot about friendships as well as how to overcome difficulties in the season and succeed," replied Jill Benson. Everytime they reached a goal, there was another one just ahead to conquer.

Difficulties in the season contributed to an unordinary year. The lack of available referees and problem of not being able to play on their home field added to the pressures of each game. "Zeus should be thankful that we stuck to the Titan theme," commented Coach Bradshaw.

They obviously overcame each difficulty and performed expertly on the field. Competing in CIF, their rigorous practices and skills led them to a victorious year.

"Contributing in a sport such as soccer allows me to release everyday stress and burn calories in the process," exclaims Allison Oldham.

The Junior Varsity girls exploded on the field, devastating opposing teams. A group of prime athletes, they endured long practices and exceeded in competition. They excelled beyond any other J.V. teams in the league.

Each individual contributed special talents toward the game. However, they cooperated with one another, enthusiastically compiling their efforts during competition. Victorious over Mt. Carmel, they continued to exceed at each game. Stephanie Toumi commented, "Besides the fact that it was good exercise, it gave us a chance to have fun."

The season remains an accomplishment for each member of the team. "There is a lot of skill on our team this year and potential for Varsity players," explains Beth Decoteau.

Coach Carter carefully draws an array of X's and O's on the board, the girls nod, and prepare a strategy for their upcoming game, but screams let out when a mouse scampers over the weight room floor. Our 1988 J.V. Girls Basketball team was a product of potential, unity, and their ability to work hard and improve.

"In the beginning it was more of a learning experience," reminded Julie Schwan, "But at the end of the season we just clicked." Improvement was the key word to describe their season. Their talent was growing daily and an instinctive drive pushed them to work together to better themselves as a team.

In his first year at Poway High, Coach Carter supported, encouraged and led our Lady Titans to victory. "He is funny, and likes to joke, but taught us a lot," concluded Amy Burke. However, behind every coach there stands a team willing to learn, perform and compete.

"We have a lot of fun, work real hard, and we are a good team that works well together," commented Linda Sitek. The girls found that by working together they became closer, while their unity allowed them to push beyond the realm of average, teaching them how to be champions. With such strong potential at their fingertips, next year PHS will be victorious.

Confidence Breeds Success

by Jeffrey K. Stahlhut

"Poway! Poway!" For years, those cries reached the ears of our Boys' Basketball Team, a team that has sent players like Jud Buecheler on to outstanding college teams. This year, those cries could also be heard ringing through the gym for the Girls' Basketball Team.

In the process of rebuilding a program, the team soared past its expectations. Coach Trousdale stated it best when he said, "I was real excited by putting a new program together and seeing improvement to the point of playing teams like Vista and Mt. Carmel well." This improvement led to top-ten rankings on occasion and a birth in the CIF playoffs. It really helped the team to have some players from last year's undefeated JV team move up to Varsity, but Seniors Jill Brawner and Lynell Stokes really shone. As Co-Captains and Co-MVP's, each girl had a major contribution to the incredible success of the team.

This year's success could also be rooted in the coaching. coach Trousdale came into a new program and put together a fantastic team. "The coaching was excellent," stated senior Tiffany Schaffer. One could definitely see the confidence this team had in itself and that confidence led to a winning record and the best season for the Girl's basketball team since their CIF title year in 1983. Hopefully with continued determination, that confidence can breed success for future teams and maybe another banner year.

Back to Poway's Winning Ways

by Paige Smith

An array of flat tops and black shoes flashed across the gym floor as this year's Boys Varsity Basketball team returned the spirit of victory to the green and the gray. Their intensity and hard working attitudes allowed the mighty titans to be among the top of the Palomar League and a top seed in the CIF Playoffs.

Building on long-term friendships, it was easy to work together as a team: "We're all friends. We're playing with guys we've played with since we were young, so we know how each other plays," commented Adam Jones. As the team set out to achieve their goals with hard work and dedication they found success.

"Intensity is the key to life, and that's how we play — intense," reflected Ty Nichols. By changing their game from a half-court to a running game, they were able to score more points and finish second in the Palomar League. "We only thought about the game we had in front of us; we didn't think ahead," remembered Jon Culbertson.

The Titans found inspiration for important games by holding pre-game team dinners. "The reason I look forward to a basketball season is so I can go over to someone else's house to mooch pizza and spaghetti, and to watch a flick," informed Jason Jones.

Much of the team's success was attributed to the inspirational coaching. Coach Saner led the team to victory by stressing fundamentals, and preparing the team for upcoming competition.

Dave Delaney summarized the season by saying, "This year's team was inspired by last year's awful showing and portrayed great pride and initiative by returning to Poway's winning ways."

"We were small, but we had speed, quickness, and desire," commented Toby Brannon. The natural talent combined with unity and hard work made this year's Freshman Basketball team a Palomar League contender.

Escaping the junior high standards, they entered into intense and rigorous high school competition. They brought it all together to play as a team and found success. After beating Mt. Carmel in the finals of their own tournament and breaking 100 points against St. Augustine, they battled to become very respected among the Palomar League.

"Behind every good team is a good coach," added Matt Kenney, "Coach Embrey was great!" Coach Embrey supported, encouraged and pushed his team into the realms of victory. But all could agree that the team's talent was very well-rounded. "We had a great starting 5, and a strong bench," said Jason Klein.

"Be your best when your best is needed," was a team philosophy used to carry our boys Junior Varsity Basketball team to be considered among the finest in the Palomar League.

"We had natural talent," commented Chad Marshall, "As individuals we were different, but some how it all came together." As they brought it together, they found success and unity. "It wasn't just the five starters, every one was positive and very supportive," reflected Jay Blankenbeckler. The team pulled together to win the Poway J.V. tournament, and came away with memorable victories against Lincoln, Mt. Carmel, and Vista.

CAPTAIN

Shane Rosselle reached another peak of success this year. A senior, Shane, was chosen as the captain of the wrestling team. Shane possessed that competitive attitude and positive outlook that had a great impact on the other wrestlers around him. While Shane motivated his team, he also accomplished many goals and won various achievements. This year, he won the 108-pound championship at the State competition in Stockton. He was named the December Athlete of the Month by Channel 39.

He was also chosen as the Times-Advocate Boys Prep Athlete of the Week because of his success at State. Shane commented that he wished, "Wrestling would receive more support. It is a worthwhile sport with lots of talented wrestlers involved." Shane plans to continue wrestling at the college level next year.

Rising Above The Rest

by Traci McClellan

Numerous names of wrestlers adorn the walls of the wrestling room. They are categorized by CIF placings and league standings. These names symbolize the hard working wrestlers over the years that have made wrestling such a success at Poway High. This year's team proved to be no exception. Coach Branstetter set high goals for the team — to win League, CIF, and place high at State. His wrestlers did not let him down either. They captured the title of League and 3A CIF champions. They also placed third at the State Competition in Stockton.

Not only winning, but positive attitudes and friendships made for a worthwhile season. The wrestlers tried to keep one another in high spirits before a match or when cutting weight. Dale Hanover commented, "We really try to psyche one another up so that we can give our match all we've got." Coach Branstetter called these dedicated, hard working athletes "over-achievers," and with their great season, they truly were.

Assurance Builds Success

"Committed", the word that best described this year's J.V. Wrestling team according to Coach Branstetter. The wrestlers worked hard and dedicated themselves to being the best. They realized that they would soon have the responsibility of carrying on the winning tradition of PHS wrestling like the Varsity this year.

Coach Branstetter's technique and style was highly praised by all the wrestlers. David Koch stated, "He works right along with us during practice, and he knows how to relate with us." Mark Golden added, "He works us, so we can be the best of our potential." Working to their potential is what this group of guys did best. With these hardworking attitudes, the success of PHS wrestling is assured.

Not sure of themselves, lost at a new school, and awkward around upperclassmen classify freshmen. But the Frosh wrestlers proved to be the opposite of this image. They possessed confident attitudes and took the joking by the older wrestlers in stride. Coach Torretto commented, "They were willing to make the extra effort it took to be good." The players were equally confident of Coach Torretto's abilities. Sheldon Hulstine stated, "He's the greatest coach because he was really hard on discipline, and that's good." Jason Tenant added with a smile, "He liked to show how macho he was." Mike Mellon challenged with an assured expression on his face, "Look out 'cause we will be even better next year."

WINTER MVP's

Doing it with Style

By Traci McClellan, Molly Smith, Paige Smith, and Jeffrey Stahlhut

The winter sports program excelled far past its expectations as all but one team made it to CIF competition. Along with the incredible team performances came outstanding individual performances. Wade Brannon voted MVP for the Boys Soccer team was one of the leading team scorers, and he also earned a spot on the Palomar League team. Jill Brawner helped lead the Girls Basketball team to its first appearance in the CIF playoffs in years while earning a First team All Palomar League spot. Alison Gibson provided strong leadership and outstanding play to the Girls Soccer team as they earned another playoff berth, in addition to a First team All Palomar League selection Shane Rosselle, a senior, won the 108-pound championship at the state wrestling meet in Stockton, California. With dedication they made themselves the tops on their team and the tops in the league.

With similar dedication and hard work we feel that these MVPs have no where to go but up.

"The main reason for being on JV, is to gain experience for Varsity. Also, volleyball is becoming recognized as a good sport for college, especially in Southern California where it originated," explained Jason Weigel. There were many reasons for joining volleyball, but for this year's team, all spelled success. They started the season by sweeping the JV Tournament at San Dieguito and the 4 Team Scrimmage at Torrey Pines. "We were definitely the best team. We dominated over any of the other teams in our league," remarked Rob Sheflo. "Practices were fun, yet relaxing. We had a wide variety of kids and a great coach, all that gave us the winning edge." Gabby Awbrey commented, "The coach was one of the guys. Believe it or not but practices were almost as fun as the games. He really knew what he was doing so we wanted to learn." "This year we couldn't lose. Everything just clicked," Keith Ball concluded.

Relaxing the Play

by Kristen Yamasaki

Fun in the sun, a relaxed atmosphere, a beach sport that represents the attitude of California — Why it must be volleyball! Rambunctious, rowdy, and relaxed perfectly describe this year's boys Varsity Volleyball team. "We were definitely a laid back team. For most other sports that would be a weakness but for volleyball, it's a plus," stated Jon Jaro. Part of that relaxed, fun-filled, and kick back attitude might have steered from the fact that until this year, boys volleyball was not recognized as a CIF sport. "In the past, there was hardly any school spirit, basically only a couple of parents. Now that it's considered CIF, hopefully we'll get more support," replied Adam Jones.

There was no change in attitude when the sport went CIF, the players still stayed calm. "It was great! My teammates were all my friends off court. I had my brother and some of my best friends," added Adam. However, the team not only had fun playing; they won. "We had a very experienced team . . . Five of the six starters had played for at least two years. We were fundamentally sound," explained Dave Delaney. "Coach Ball has been the best coach in the county every year he has had a team. He made it fun, which is why we had the best team for winning it all," admitted Kevin Kohler.

Hitting the Top

by Traci McClellan

"We have equal abilities and perform on the same level. Our second string is just as good as our first," commented Mike Pedrotti about his JV baseball teammates. Troy Nichols commented, "We want to play for everyone, not just ourselves." This attitude let the players come together and work on perfecting their technique. They strove to better themselves and encourage one another. Under new Head JV Coach, Ed Nelson, the players became determined to rise to the challenge. Scott McMahon described him this way, "He doesn't say a lot, but when he does, it really means something." The coach and players working together traveled on the path of success this season.

It's the bottom of the ninth, two outs, and a full count on the batter. He looks nervous as the pitcher winds up. He hits the fast ball, and a resounding thud in the first baseman's glove assures the last out. A cheer rises from the crowd as the fate of another Frosh game is determined. As usual, the Poway team wins again. The stiff competition to make this year's team, 60 boys tried out, allowed the team to be bigger than usual with 27 members. Coach Lekvold commented, "It was a real shock to see so many go out, and I know we have a high skill level." Dan Olszewski concluded, "We win because we have a system and know each other's moves," and their season proved it.

A Spirited Revival

by Traci McClellan

Throwing practice balls and warming up signified the start of another Varsity baseball game at Poway High. The guys strove to reach their goal of attaining the CIF championship by working together. Pat Vinoni commented, "We're like one big family. We really enjoy playing together." This thought was also shared by Alon Banks who stated, "We all work well together because we're on the same skill level."

Not only did they work together, but the did it successfully under the new head coach, Rudy Casciato. Steve Wrenn was "really impressed with his leadership and motivational techniques." While Chris McDermott felt, "He really cares about the individual as well as the team." The players thought Coach Casciato to be an added incentive to playing baseball at Poway High School.

The many years of playing experience contributed to the team's success as well; they spanned from nine to thirteen years on the field. This made the competition to reach the Varsity level more intense, assuring only the most talented and hard working ball players a spot on this dynamic team.

Billy Wraith received the privilege of being chosen Varsity team captain. Billy has been a veteran of baseball for nine years. He was named MVP his frosh year. He has also been on the All-Star team in Rancho Bernardo for six years. Billy felt "always being positive" was the key to success. He also set a goal for himself, "to be the best I can be in everything I do." Billy reached his goals like being the best he could be and maintaining a high batting average. By fulfilling his goals, this let him encourage his teammates to be their best. Alon Banks summed up Billy's influence on the team by saying, "He really gets us going for the game."

SOFTBALL

Poway Hits a Double

by Elisa Smith

"Come on Kathy! Good eye Di! Way to go Boomer!" These familiar words from the JV Softball team echoed through the field whether in practice or in a game. Yells, whistles, and cheers of encouragement were constantly emitted from the dugout. "The great thing about our team was that we never dwelt too long on a bad play or a bad inning because we got ourselves psyched up by yelling and screaming!" said Erin-Mary Barrett. The team managed to keep this positive attitude through the majority of the season. Coach Campbell agreed with Varsity coach Barker-Ball that attitude is a major factor in playing good softball. Many times a player could be seen doing pushups after saying the taboo words, "I can't!" Another factor in a good softball team is talent and ability. According to Campbell, "I saw our team having a lot more talent than the teams of previous years!"

The second freshman team in the history of Poway softball continued its effectiveness in the '88 season. Because a freshman coach was not in the budget for the softball program, the three teams, Varsity, JV, and Frosh, raised the money themselves by selling tickets for a spaghetti dinner held on Spring Sports Night. The money raised brought Lynn Leger to the Poway fields every afternoon to coach the younger team. Hopefully this new aspect of the softball program will set a precedent for future freshman teams in other sports.

"Our coach was really tough and made us work hard but we tried our best and had a lot of fun!" said Chris Adams, Beth LaRocque, and Billie Macuse. Coach Leger had the team concentrate on the basics at first and each day the girls continued to progress. Robin Miller and Kathleen Monahan explained that, "The coaching and playing we had this year helped train us for our future on the JV and Varsity levels."

SOFTBALL

One Big Stride to Success

by Elisa Smith

"What can I say, we're awesome!" was the general consensus on the Varsity Softball team. "Our defense was strong enough that with our accurate pitchers we could field almost anything!" explained Mrs. Barker-Ball, the Varsity coach. Because the team was very young, consisting of mostly Sophomores and Juniors plus one Freshman and three Seniors, Jennifer Shuey saw that "the Varsity team will continue to be awesome in the coming years because most of us will be working and practicing for three years."

Another plus for the team was its overwhelmingly positive attitude. The basis for Mrs. B's philosophy was that "constant communication will greatly improve the effectiveness of each play and will strengthen the morale of the team." Heather Kritzer commented that, "the encouragement was great, and when someone felt down because of a bad play, everyone helped bring her up!" Debbie Guerena and Tiffany Schafer agreed that a positive attitude, "dedication and determination were the foundations for our team." These foundations proved strong and extremely effective throughout the season.

The essence of last year's Varsity team is obvious in Lisa Palmer's observation that, "the friendship on the team is so incredible that even if we lost the game, we ended up winning!"

Playing With Power

by Paige Smith

"Now you're playing with power," was a phrase commonly used when the Boys Varsity Tennis Team exhibited their strength on the court. With such an abundance of talent the boys found that they could rely on their depth to reach their goals. "If some one is playing bad, some one else will always be playing their best," commented Jason Fleck. Mike Lerner added, "It's a team — not just one star, we are solid." Poway exhibited their abilities to toy with teams while maintaining an impressive record. Going out and having a good time became a team priority which allowed the athletes to become closer and support each other for the benefit of the program. "This year's team has the capabilities to excel in every phase of the game," remarked Scott Basinger. With the talent and support backing the Titans, they were able to find success amongst the Palomar League.

Striving To Be The Best

by Paige Smith

Pushing themselves to turn potential into success, the Boys JV Tennis Team powered by tough competition to achieve victory.

Overcoming youth with talent, the boys found that their goals could become reality. With driving attitudes they found the motivation to get through Coach Parinello's "work-out" days and laps before practice.

"Our enthusiasm gave us the extra edge to be the best," commented David Anet. Competition drove the players to excel and succeed not only for themselves, but for the team. They found it easy to support each other after establishing strong friendships and together, they strived to achieve their goals. "Our goals were simple, to improve, do well, and win," reflected Eric Purvis.

Potential, enthusiasm and hard work led to the team's realization that they could be the best.

The Road To Victory

by Danielle Pagnini

Everyday after school for about three months, our girls J.V. track team practiced faithfully for upcoming events with competing schools. Their conditioning and experience this past year prepared them for the upcoming Varsity team. Although the team had encountered some problems with the track, they were still strong. As one runner, Christie Allen stated, "We all looked forward to using the newly constructed track." She also commented, "Being the first J.V. girls track team to utilize the new track, we felt motivated to excel more as a team." Through the rigorous practices, the girls gained a new respect for each other and the sport. Mr. Jones sums up the year by stating, "The success they had this year will continue on in years to come." With the records they set this year, they certainly do hold a promising future.

Fighting to be the Best

by Sandy Berndsen

Bang! The gun sounded and the runners were off. Coming 'round the bend, Poway High's Girls Varsity Track was in the lead to win this important heat. This was the scene on the track, one warm spring day. This year the Girls Varsity Track Team did a fine job in trying to stay on top by competing with the hardest competitors. Their strong willed minds and close friendships helped to keep the team together forming one big family. As Teresa Davis stated, "I love to go to practices and see all my friends. Track is really a lot of fun." Fun came through as well when it came to competing. The Palomar League hosted many of the toughest teams in SD County.

The demanding track schedule gave the girls an added edge for CIF.

This edge also could be seen in each area of the track team. Distance, hurdlers, and throwers benefited from tough competition coming from our rivals, Mt. Carmel and Vista. As Samantha Brown stated, "Our goal is to win CIF." but this could not be accomplished without the many hours, days, and even non-school weeks practicing until many of the athletes felt that they would collapse. Kim Vidal felt that, "Many's the time when I thought I couldn't make it but when we get all psyched up, the whole team that is, we are able to win." And in the end, Poway did come out winners.

They both hope to continue this success in future years at Poway High School.

Encouraging Others

by Gretchen Beck

The spring sun beat down lightly as the Freshman boy sprinted down Titan Way. A red truck pulled up next to him, and a cheery voice said, "Hey, you should come out for the Freshman Track Team this year." Words such as these helped encourage the Freshmen Boys. The coaches not only tried to recruit players but also supported the athletes to the utmost. "It's great to be a part of such a great track team that has such talented, patient and understanding coaches," explained Dart Magana.

The Varsity players also helped reinforce the Freshmen to perform to their best ability. No matter what event the Freshmen seemed to be competing in, there was always some upperclassmen cheering them on. Many of the Freshman boys felt that this support made them want to try their hardest. And, most of the time, they succeeded. Toby Shearer concluded with, "The Varsity, as well as the coaches and fans influence, was great and was a major part of our success this past year."

The night before Mt. Sac one could find nearly all the boys from the Junior Varsity Track Team huddled over huge bowls of pasta. The carbohydrates helped prepare the bodies of the athletes for the upcoming meet, and the parties themselves helped psyche the team up emotionally. "These gatherings really help bring the team together, in a way in which everyone seems very supportive." stated Erik Pearson.

This support came through when the boys could see that they were improving, whether it was by times that dropped several seconds, jumps that would glide a few inches higher, or throwing farther. And when the team as a whole felt successful, personal satisfaction as well played a major part in the athlete's lives. Jeff Augustyn stated, "This year the Boys Junior Varsity Team was a success, due to the tremendous amount of encouragement that was given and received by all members.

Titans Hustle at Home

by Noel Mellon

As the sharp crack of the referee's gun struck the warm spring air, Titans and their opponents flew out of the starting blocks and hurled their bodies around the track. As the smoke cleared and the athletes could be seen coming around the last stretch, one certain sprinter could be seen giving the race their all. That athlete was a Titan, and he exemplified the efforts of all the boys on Varsity.

Natural ability pulled our Varsity Track team into top league rankings this year. "Although we lost many seniors," commented Jerry Ashworth and Doug Schwenke, "we came back just as strong as before. Eddie Paz added, "Our team was young, so we'll have much chance to improve ourselves."

And a great future they will have, with the strong friendships that developed throughout the season. "We were all a big family, out to have a good time and defend our CIF title," explained Ricky Legaspi.

Unfortunately, our new famed all-weather track, due to repairs, wasn't available for team use. But James Labrador proudly stated, "Although we didn't have a track at the beginning of the season, our team has done exceptionally well!"

SWIMMING

A Stroke Above the Rest

by Molly Smith

"We overcame injuries and performed much stronger than the previous year," commented Keith Hanson.

With practices nearly every morning or afternoon the Varsity Boys Swimming team definitely dedicated themselves to their conditioning in the pool. Rigorous practices developed necessary endurance for a successful season. Preparing for their meets required a constant effort from everyone.

Injuries affected various players, however the team pulled through and competed excellently. The guidance of team captain Ray Underburg and spirit of athlete Mike Jacoway encouraged the team to unite and perform to the best of their ability.

Shaded slightly by the Girls Varsity last year, they crushed their previous stigma and produced a fine name for themselves.

According to Mike Steffans it was great exercise to swim everyday and stay in shape. He kidded, "Besides, I liked to wear the speedo!"

Setting The Pace

by Danielle Pagnini

Water churning and splashing were the sounds that announced another swim meet. This year our Girls Varsity Swim team got off to a smashing start. As Shannon Griffin stated, "Even though we all compete individually, we stay together as a team and cheer everyone on." This year's team consisted of "returners" and added two freshmen to carry on the winning tradition. The team was stronger than ever. Sarie McFarland said, "There was a lot of depth to the team which adds strength in competition." With confident attitudes like these, the girls had no problem defending their CIF title from last year. Sarah Massengill noted that, "Sure, we complain about the long hours spent on practicing before meets, but without the practices we wouldn't be as good as we are today." Beth Engstrom summed it up with, "We're full of spirit!" The Girl's Varsity Swim Team can proudly say that they have only lost one meet in the past two years.

Lapping The Opposition

by Andrea Hayek

"Bang!" They're off. Every muscle pumped in harmony in order to beat the opponent's time by tenths of a second. Such was the precision necessary to be successful in swimming. It was this goal that the JV Swimmers worked at as they practiced five days a week. The most exciting aspect, as explained by Vanessa Owens was, "The challenge of working to improve yourself."

The interest in the sport was best expressed, by the considerable size of the team, 65 people. For those who wonder why people would put up with green "chlorinized" hair and "prune-like" skin they can be sure it's not, "To get a Speedo tan line," joked Nancy Noel.

As the swimmers nervously stood on the block waiting to take the plunge, they knew they had the support of the team. They stood behind each other, but also agreed that Coach McCoy's enthusiasm was essential: "The team wouldn't be the same without her." However, the ultimate success of the team was dependent on their attitude and effort.

Taking the Plunge

by Sandy Berndsen

"Diving is cooler than anything," stated Mike Harding. This was evident as the many divers found it to be exciting and fun. The super, strong strength of a diver showed as he stood on the end of the board with a look of concentration and the pursuit of excellence on his face. As Greg Stampfli stated, "The anxiety received through spinning and twisting is thrilling."

Having a fairly young team this year, the divers hoped to improve and prepare their skills for CIF and League. Their coach, Lisa Smedly, did a terrific job of helping them do just that, improve. She also commented that, "The team has a lot of potential and they are learning fast." A diver knew of that improvement when they had "ripped" one of his harder dives. The secret to the success was perfection and they felt a sense of accomplishment when they stood at the end of a meet, holding a trophy, knowing that they were truly winners.

by Jeffrey K. Stahlhut

"Varsity," that is the goal for determined JV golfers stated Doug Orvis. This goal is not an easy one but for the JV and Freshman golf teams it is what motivated them to play their best. This is the main reason for the success of the team. It is so competitive to make the team; our program has become the strongest golf program in San Diego.

Led by outstanding plays from sophomores Sean Prendergast and Matt Uyeda this year's team dominated its competition. The Freshman team improved immensely and their hard work really paid off. They were led by James Wraith who also put in time on the JV and Varsity teams.

One could easily spot the JV team hard at work at Oaks North Golf Course. Whether it was practicing putting on the crowded putting green or spending seventy-five cents a basket on the driving range, the hard work put in by the JV and Freshman teams is sure paid off in the future for the Varsity. And that once seemingly impossible goal could become a reality.

GOLF

Winning at the Mental Game

by Jeffrey K. Stahlhut

When asked what makes a good golfer the response from every player on the Varsity Golf Team stated, "The mental game." Maybe that is the reason for the success of Poway's golf team. Along with excellent playing the team received superb coaching. "Coach Miller really helped us on the mental game," stated team Captain Lance Seymour.

By outthinking their opponents, the team really played above par and finished great. Even though this year's team was younger than the teams in the past, they lived up to their expectations by working hard and meeting the challenge. Of course it also helped to have an "All-American Golfer," Kieth Sbarbaro. They also received excellent play from Robert Dennison and returning starters Kurt Liss and Scott Humphrey.

Being a young team does have its advantages; for instance, next year's team is sure to be in the tops among the County with future stars like Freshman James Wraith leading the way.

The game of gold is not all fun and games though, "sometimes it is really frustrating," stated Kurt Liss. And the main reason for the frustration according to Lance is the "inconsistency" of the game. If the future teams can beat the inconsistency the way this year's team did, the future for Poway high golf looks just as good as the past.

Strong with determination, the Titan gymnast sprinted steadily toward the vault, flinging herself into the air. She completed a perfect front flip and confidently landed with a proud smile.

"Miss Minius encouraged everyone to try their best and improve in each new practice." commented Christina Collins. "I admire her dedication."

Inspired by the guidance of their coach, the gymnastics team excelled in each of their given specialties. They needed a focused eye to compete on the balance beam, and the courage to spring off of a vault. The strength to perform on the parallel bars and dynamic technique during floor exercises was required for ultimate performance. They always managed to express tremendous physical skill. Competing proudly in their meets, they defeated other schools in their league.

During daily practices, each team member guided one another with their routines. They participated in a conditioning program which consisted of stretching, lifting weights, and practicing gymnastic maneuvers. Inspired by friendship, they constantly improved and achieved tremendous success. Pride swept the season.

As the new year rolled in the teachers patiently awaited the new students and new challenges. "It is on the shoulders of the students to learn," stated Mrs. Fulwiler. An increase in population has encouraged the teachers to find new techniques and ideas to get the students motivated to learn. "My teachers have strived to inspire the students to express their opinions in class," stated Joann Schlecht. Striving For The Top

Administration

by Danielle Pagnini

As the lunch bell rang, five figures immersed from the front office. These five people are the people that make up our administration.

The administration was here to serve and protect individuals such as teachers and students. We had five such people. The Principal, Dr. Hughes was our representative to the PTSA; he also supervised the ASB director. He also looked after our redevelopment foundation. Dean Killon controlled our master schedule and our budget. Also he led a departmental liaison in Industrial Arts and the P.E. Department. Chris Fergus supervised guidance and counseling, was in charge of registration, and worked the college and scholarship area. Jerry Leininger did security for all school activities, any discipline referrals and all permits were done through him. Scott Fisher worked with advanced placement programs, staff development, and curriculum development.

Through these people our school was able to run effectively and efficiently. They were in charge of everything from chair administrative to the board to teacher evaluations. Although each person was assigned specific duties, they all worked together as a group. As one student noted, "Although I don't really know our administration, I do know that they do a lot for our student body."

These five people together made a strong system. Working together they are able to get a lot of tough work accomplished in a short period of time.

Dean Killion strolls with the trash can.

Counselors

by Sandy Berndsen

"For new students, the counselors have done a tremendous job in helping them plan for the future," remarked Katie Salo.

This year the counselors have strived to be the best. With help from two new IBM computers, students could work on career and college choices by just pushing a few keys. The counselors had their hands full with college nights and representatives. "I'm really amazed at how the administration has dealt with the population problem at Poway High. Even though we have a lot of students, the counselors have still done an excellent job with college representatives who bring their college campuses with them so I can see what college life is really like," stated Lisa Cotugno.

The counselors were also enthused about the peer counselors. Cathy Moran exclaimed, "The peer counselors are awesome!" They were an extra asset because they took part of the stress off the regular counselors. A hope for new computers with terminals in their offices would also give the counselors extra time to help students. Using these additions to the counseling office, such as the peer counselers, worked to meet the needs of the students.

Controlling the System

by Danielle Pagnini

You saw them everyday whether roaming the halls of Poway High asking students for hall passes or patroling the traffic on Titan Way. They were there. Yes, they were our Campus Supervisors. They kept a broad overview of what was happening everyday on campus by their walkie talkies. This new addition was added in an attempt to keep the students in line. These were just one example of some of the people who kept our school running properly.

Along with Campus Supervisors, we had assistants to help out teachers. Not only did they help the teachers but they also were able to help students when needed. Some students found them very helpful and were very grateful when they were there.

With all of these wonderful people, we also have our secretaries. Our secretaries answered phones and typed, but they also dealt with students and their problems all day long.

With all of this work to do, one could say it was true dedication that kept these people going. Their time, effort, and work certainly paid off. As Jane Hancock stated, "I have seen a lot change, and it's all for the better."

"Say Cheese," smiled the cafeteria workers.

Critical Thinking

by Sandy Berndsen

"I feel that the history teachers have put forth the best effort to teach us, the students, about our American heritage," stated Garrette Cook. The Social Science department this year has definitely showed elite qualities. These teachers are always confident in their classes and have much enthusiasm about their subjects. The dedication to their students has shown up this year in incorporating the historical facts to develop writing skills. As Mr. Peterson, the department chairman, stated, "Social Science is the best for combining the writing skills of English with the subject matter of History, Civics, Economics, and Psychology. Also our area develops critical thinking skills for citizen awareness. Our teachers are the best for applying concrete information by using all learning skills." The teachers felt that the students retain more through writing. Yes, the student did have to learn the facts, but they didn't have to memorize them out of the book. Even though the students learned more, the teachers had to do twice the work due to the fact that the classes have increased in size. Since education depends on discussion, students need to participate in the classroom. If the classroom is overfilled, this cannot be accomplished, but in the long run students did learn to write, make their grade, and become educated.

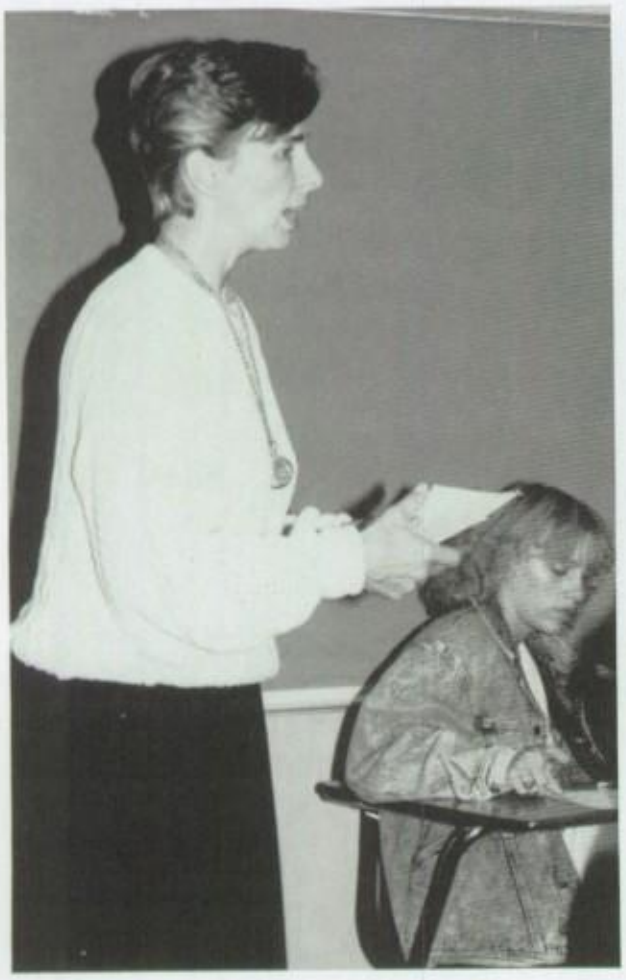
Inspiring Minds

by Sandy Berndsen

"Writing is a personal way in which we get to know our students," stated Ms. Heath. In the beginning it is hard for a student to want to write, but with a teacher's hard work and enthusiasm a student can learn to love writing. As Helena Cushnie stated, "I was glad to have some teachers that understood the pressures that most students were put through." The English department, being the largest with 23 members, brought forth the best collection of spirit, ideas, and motivation this year. The teachers taught the students to express themselves which made English fun. It is no wonder that this was possible when every holiday and birthday was celebrated with a party. This brought forth a group that works closely together and coordinates their teachings. For example, many of the teachers taught poetry at the beginning of the year because they felt it was one of the most important parts of English. The classes were also encouraged to participate in the literary magazine which is put together by interested students and teachers.

Senior Von Wiederrich stated, "I really have enjoyed the fine literature that I have studied over the past year in English."



"That homework has got to be done," says Mrs. Marshall.

Learning By Numbers

by Danielle Pagnini

Be careful if you fall asleep in Mrs. Liska's classroom — you might just get squirted with water as students in her fifth-period classroom revealed. One teacher, Miss Carson, in the spirit of the holidays, decorated her classroom with tinsel. She did this in the shape of a cosine curve to make her students more interested in learning.

Math is a requirement for two years, but most students continued with it through their junior and senior year. Mr. Kolezar commented that his students in general are displaying very good work ethics while realizing math can be fun.

Math like any other subject can be a rewarding one. Molly Smith stated that math is like a puzzle, "you need all the pieces for the puzzle and the teachers put the pieces together for you."

The quality of teaching in the Math Department is expressed through Mr. Foster's view by stating, "Over-all Poway High has had the most competent math teachers in San Diego."

Through a combined mixture of creative teaching as shown to us by Mrs. Liska and Miss Carson, students are understanding math. They are even enjoying it. Marianne Sharp commented, "Although math is difficult, it is preparing me for future college classes in general." So always remember that math can be very rewarding in the end.

Sweating It Out

By Danielle Pagnini

The sound of feet pounding on the ground was a familiar sound you would hear if you were walking into the P.E. department. This year the P.E. classes as well as our athletic teams were running on Poway's new all-weather track. As volleyball player Stephanie Feaster commented, "The track makes it much easier to run on and it increases your speed."

By now you may be asking yourself what does all-weather mean? As Coach Embrey stated, "The track is usable in any weather conditions such as rain." This will definitely be more convenient for all of the P.E. classes. To some the track looked more appealing and hopefully would encourage running. As student Dominque Koch exclaimed, "It's awesome!"

Besides the use of this good facility, the P.E. department offered a wide variety of sports which could interest anyone. The Freshmen were involved with everything from swimming to soccer and the upperclassmen also participated in a wide range of sport activities.

As Eddie Cornblum commented, "P.E. is a experience of a life time." But some students do take P.E. as an important activity. Some students feel that it was good to have P.E. as a part of their daily schedule. The students were able to learn their strengths and abilities through individual and team sports.

Even though P.E. was a requirement for two years, some students continue on with it. They enjoyed the challenge and physical requirements it possessed Stephanie Toumi commented by saying, "It's good exercise and helps keep you in shape."

As the P.E. dept. expanded and changed, it became stronger in every aspect. Mr. Saner sums it up by saying, "Poway High is constantly improving in all aspects."

Science Gets Garb

by Sandy Berndsen

Test tubes boiled and students worked vigorously to get that lab done by the end of class. Such was the scene on a typical day in a science class. This year, out of 2900 students at Poway High, 2200 took a science class. The major excitement of the year was a laser disk for the department which provided instantaneous visual pictures of things such as cell parts and paramecium. This was bought by a grant which was written by members of the department. Jill Pineault stated, "I am glad that computers were used more in the classroom this year, so we learned more about microscopic life." Some classes even had unusual events which encouraged learning and participation. As Rob Noel explained one of his AP Biology labs by saying, "We cooked eggs with nitric acid, so now we can take ROP restaurant." Shaun Storm remarked, "In my Oceanography class, we watched a movie about surfing called "The Endless Summer," which was really fun."

Mr. Mello summed up this year's students by commenting, "The students at Poway High are the neatest to work with because of their upbeat positive attitudes and their willingness to participate in the classroom."

It's A Small World

by Danielle Pagnini

¡Hola!, Guten Tag, and Bonjour are all common statements one might have heard around campus. Yes, these are the people that have taken a foreign language.

There were many reasons why students took a foreign language class. A common reply might be for college but for others this was not true, as student Teresa Vodal commented, "It was a challenging course and one that pushed you to learn." She also noted that her teacher was very enthusiastic about teaching which made a difference to her.

Presenting the language in such a way that was interesting could be a challenge. Teacher Mrs. Breckenridge noticed that teaching to a numerous number of students was challenging but in the end very rewarding.

Some students such as Kelly Weber and Sarie McFarland stated that they took a foreign language possibly for future use in a career occupation.

For some, their reasons for taking a foreign language were personal. In taking a language, students learned about different customs, lifestyles, and cuisine.

There were many benefits to taking a foreign language. For some it was the challenge of learning. For others it was for future career opportunities.

Teaching the Facts of Life

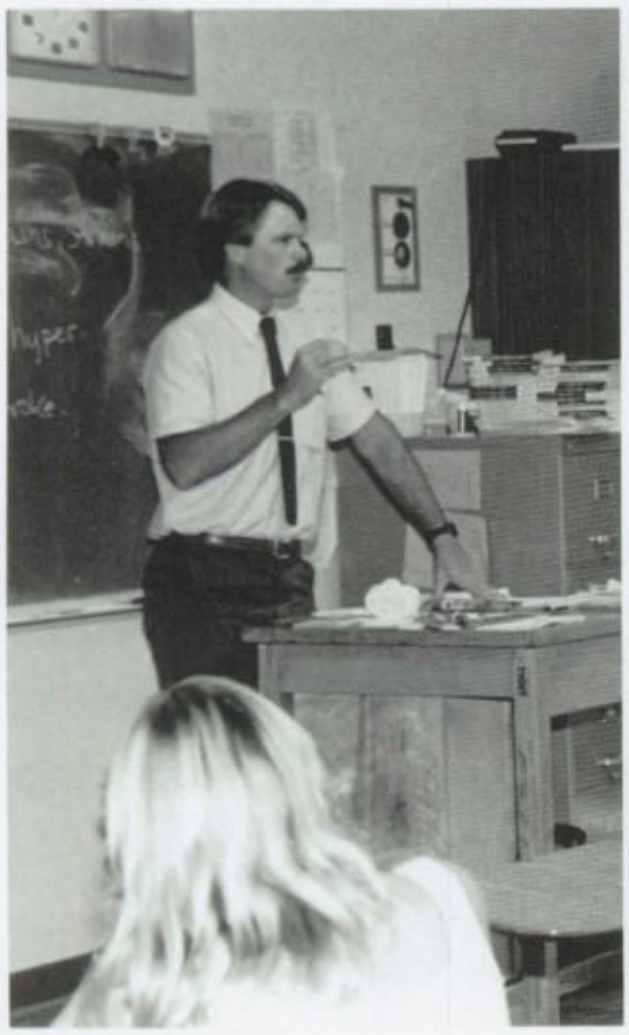
by Sandy Berndsen

Health

Eager students awaited the arrival of their teacher, for this wasn't just any class; it was Health. Health consisted of many freshman trying to learn information concerning sex education and AIDS. Their high degree of intensity paid off in a quest for new knowledge. The health teachers tried to implement the students' education with the latest and most up to date knowledge. Mr. Nelson believed, "Motivation in students makes the teachers want to teach."

The students received an impact of knowledge as well. Noell McCool saw the Health class as being "fun, enjoyable, and exciting to learn about the different aspects of health." Besides learning about physical problems, drug abuse, and CPR were studied. Within the subject of CPR a dummie named Annie was used to perform practice resuscitation sessions. This enabled the student to experience a real-to-life situation.

Health class gave students an opportunity to expand their knowledge. With the changing information, students were well informed with the world. Susie Thorsfeldt felt, "My health class has informed me of many different angles of life."



Mr. Nelson says . . .

Special Education

Watch out students you may have high competition for a job. This year the Special Education students were able to take a class that helped the students work outside the classroom in the community at job sites during the school day. This provided excellent experience for the future. The students also performed plays for different holidays and sent the tapes to a producer. While in the classroom, they worked on subjects such as cooking and taking care of themselves in an apartment-type atmosphere.

Another section of the department worked mainly on perfecting basic reading, writing, and math skills. Also, strategies for learning were taught. This helped students to be able to learn in the regular classroom, which was also reflected outside as well. Sean Heyenga stated, "I don't consider them as Special Ed. I react to them as I would anyone else."

As Mrs. Smith stated, "My students work super hard to achieve their goals." This year was beneficial to the students as well as the teachers in experiencing the qualities of life and working in the job world.

Learning Survival Skills

Consumer Education

By Danielle Pagnini

As you walked into a cooking classroom, some familiar sounds rang out, the banging of pots and pans, the clanking of plates being set and, of course, talking. Some people imagined a cooking class was easy or something you should try to learn because after all you might have to cook yourself.

True — it was fun to learn but as student Valerie Hackett pointed out, "Cooking teaches you the basics for survival once you're on your own."

Because cooking classes were electives, a student showed a genuine interest in learning by signing up for one. Since students will be using their cooking abilities possibly for the rest of their lives, this was definitely an important class. Mrs. Hotaling noted that during the past five years there has been an increase of about one-third more "guys" in her cooking classes. This showed that "guys" are willing to learn too.

Some students pursued cooking even farther into ROP restaurant. Teacher Ann Gemmill stated, "They learn how to make current foods." This would help them once they were on their own and needed to cook for themselves. They met seventh period Wednesday and Thursday and offered students a wide variety of foods from brownies to hamburgers.

Other classes offered were Interior Design, Single Survival, and Clothing. A recent one added in the past year was Fashion Merchandising. All of these classes were prepared and represented in a way that would help students meet future living demands.

Business

"No matter what you do you will have to use business in your life sometime," stated Mr. Bill Rarity. Some students might ask themselves why take a business course. They might feel they don't need one or they don't have room in their schedule. But you might want to stop and think. As student Kim Moyer stated, "Typing will definitely help me in the future if I decide to go maybe into a secretarial type of job." Typing enabled you to learn the keyboard which also helped you if you were interested in the computer. Students, Mark Pearce and Carl Boernecke took typing for this reason. Some students such as Jenny Lee took typing just because they enjoyed it. As teacher Sandra Childers commented, "Typing is a good experience." Business offered a variety of topics such as learning to balance a checkbook, how to be a careful consumer, and how to manage money. They also taught you other basic skills that are needed after high school. Along with business and typing Poway High offered computer classes. Since computers were the wave of the future, they would probably be here for awhile. Knowing more about how they worked and definitely how to use one would be more beneficial. As Karin Morrison stated, "I hoped it would help me with my career goals in the future." Along with business, typing, and computers Accounting was offered. Accounting helped teach some basics skills such as how to deal with future finances. It also helped students manage their time. All of these courses would definitely better a student as well as prepare him for college.

Creativity Sparks Works of Art

Fine Arts

by Sandy Berndsen

The scent of the clay was overwhelming in the ceramics room. Strolling by the students, while working on their important projects, one could feel the intensity of their craftsmanship. Questioning their teacher, Mr. Carr about new and exciting things in ceramics this year and he replied, "No, but ceramics are being used world wide for things such as the tiles in the Space Shuttle."

In Jewelry and Crafts classes a new sandblasting machine was installed. This helped to smooth out the finishing touches. Next year crafts will be changed to be called Design and Mixed Media which shall also be rewritten to meet the visual and performing arts requirement. Larry Bouligny commented about Jewelry by saying, "If I had not taken Jewelry I would'nt have any to wear."

Across the quad and over to H-1, one could notice the "Artist of the Day" painting. This was a new edition to the art department which gets the paintings and painters noticed. Dacia Cooper remarked that, "Art is a way of release both positive and negative." The Fine arts department this year, held both qualities of creativeness and participation to work productively with their hands.

Industrial Arts

by Danielle Pagnini

As sparks fly off in different directions, you can hear metal being cut as well as the teacher instructing the students. These are some sounds one might hear in any of Poway High's Industrial Art classes.

In these classes students not only learn things mentally but also physically. With their hands they constructed and fixed things to the best of their ability. With the addition of computers in almost all of the classes students learned a more modern approach to such classes, which included auto shop, metal, wood, and drafting. As Mr. Roybal commented, "All of the Industrial Art classes are trying to move into the twentieth century."

Some students such as Steve Kerr took small engines to become more mechanically inclined. For others such as Keith Opstad who took drafting were more interested in a future occupation. But as Bruce Phillips sums it up, "the best thing was that it was a break between academic classes."

In all of these Industrial Art classes you could see a sense of involvement. Whether through interest or just plain wanting to learn, these classes taught the basics for further development in the future.

Feelings of Achievement

by Sandy Berndsen

As most students assembled into regular education classes, other pupils were interested in learning a more advanced skill. The Regional Occupational Program, commonly called ROP, provided students with a way of working and participating with others in a job-related atmosphere. "ROP has helped me to get along with others in a new and satisfying way," stated Matthew Hall. Mrs. Gemmill also commented on ROP Restaurant by saying, "It is great on-the-job experience which benefits the faculty as well as the students."

Whether it was "O" period, during lunch, or after school, the students and teachers alike had to take out extra time for these classes. It was the extra effort that made the class more interesting and fun. This extra time for both the students and faculty gave them a feeling of a job well done. "I enjoy repairing in ROP Building because it gives me a feeling of satisfaction," stated Rob Lafever. Accomplishing the various types of jobs also made students feel unique. Rick Micheri concluded by saying "Being unique comes into play when you complete the course and enter into the many opportunities offered in these ROP fields."

LITERARY CONTEST

First Place
Strangers

Watch the ones who walk on by,
Shapeless figures to cloud the sky,
Marking time until they die,
Kaleidoscope of strangers.

So full of life and identity,
In sadly suspended anonymity,
Forever nameless to me they'll be
An endless string of strangers.

Textured faces blur my view,
Near and far; old and new,
Flashes of color give no clue,
To the origin of strangers.

The friendly offer an honest smile,
Providing a glimpse of individual style,
But the insight lasts for the shortest while,
Till they return to the role of the stranger.

Others dismiss with a curt nod,
Cringing behind their flimsy facade,
And then continue their lengthy trod,
Down the path of the stranger.

The rush of busy flow down the street,
A collage of characters I'll never meet,
Images fulfilling, yet incomplete,
Forever existing as strangers.

Changes

Yesterday we played store and pretended to be grown-up but today we have our own jobs and still put on the older act.

We used to have fun reading stories in our text making believe we were the main characters but now we analyze novels without hinting a smile.

Our pastime was jumping rope and playing on the monkey bars now we go to parties and out to dance clubs

Boys were on our hate list and cooties were spreading rapidly but we've changed our opinions about males though, we can catch diseases without caution.
Our big dreams were to be teachers and retire as millionaires.
Our goals today are to survive SATs and make it into college.

Yesterday we were young and ready to explore life but today we have matured and started our journey into the real world.

Ode Till Death Do Us Part

A dead rose weeps under Tear-dropped blades

Burdens lifted free as smoke in a singles bar floating about from lung to lung
The penthouse on Central Park
A jail cell with a toilet and no door
The million-dollar will deceitfully forged.
A fingerprint on the windowpane
Burdens lifted.

The beautiful scarlet rose garden with thorns
A rock crushing party with a ball and chains.
A dead rose weeps under Tear-dropped blades of grass
Burdens lifted

A drop of arsenic in the bourbon
The black sequin gown
A navy blue suit and holster
Burdens lifted
the pop of a cork
A knock at the door
The diamond brooch

Burdens regained

Memory

The present is the ground we stand on firm beneath our feet
How hard it is to look ahead and wonder at the road before us.
The past beckons
with golden drops of memory
It shimmers and disappears like the silk of a fine web
How we long to catch these strands and hold them one last time
But the arrival of dusk wraps Memory in soft folds of night
And in dark hours we feel the present something we can grasp — the new the living, this moment
We live for what we have not seen so cherish the thoughts, the almost forgotten and cherish more what is to come.

Drips of blood flawlessly flow
From your porcelain nose
Staining your white cotton
Knit pants
Gaily you laugh out loud pointing
To you nostril saying: "Oh, rusty Pipes. Ha-ha."
This disease of yours is degradingly
Awful.
It is not a joke
Nothing to laugh at Killing your beautiful, bright brain
Pulling blood away from your pumping Heart
Breathing your last breath . . .
Broken mirrors
Old picture frames
White dust falling from the blue Horizon
Rolled bills
Broken pens
Can you not see your reflection?
I shed a shiny crystal tear
Down my soft cheek
It reminds me of the fiery
Drop of blood which dripped
From your "Rusty pipes."

Some of the Best Years of Our Life

All of our friends
Lost and gained
Are locked in our minds,
those memories that stay remained.
We've watched them graduate,
now we see them come.
Some of the best years of their life,
spent beneath the Poway sun.
After school detentions,
How we complained,
just so unworthy to mention!
So we ditched,
look what that got us into,
IN-SCHOOL SUSPENSION!
Trips to downtown,
Dressing spiffy
just to hear some groovy sounds.
Outrageous nights singing to the ocean,
hangin' out having fun
til the night turns into day.
Remember our first trip to the ASB store?
All squashed up
& just a 'feeling like sardines, Nevertheless those sweets
drew us back for more.
Wot' about our high school sweethearts,
So simply tragic when we broke apart!
Haaaaa, what a BIG JOKE!!
If they only knew we laugh at them,
They'd probably choke!
Our first big social gathering was some homecoming game, That's when we realized
our friendship's bond,
was strong and willing to gain.
The season's cold, and warm winds sweep on by,
Wow, time has passed rather quickly.
Come hither my friend;
Let's analyze the situation and the theory of "WHY?"
After much Indicia Rose incense is burned
A warm presence is left.
Like when we leave these rooms and halls,
Such a special part of our life is left.
Ready or not,
awaiting are those blue June skies.
Then my best friend is when we must bid our goodbyes.
To the youthful times of high school
Some of the best years of our life.

On Returning to the University Library OR How I Spent My Summer Vacation.

Here, the wandering tick of sole meeting marble defines a more eternal Time.
The past year's progress reports and due dates pale under the imperatives of how and why.

Space expands to the universe within. Volumes, numbered like newly discovered stars, open to other worlds, the infinite of another's intellect.
These minds banked in aisles dissolve all walls, offer the calm leaves of classics, misplaced manifestoes,
a poet's devotion.

Stacked and strewn in mid-use over an oaken expanse, my quarried armful depicts a mind in bas relief.

Away from the clay
of adolescents, thought quickens to incadescence, drawing me from the mire like dawn smoke rising from Tuscan kilns.

Nearby, The School of Athens invites me to ponder in the vaulted hemisphere where thinking's as deft
as the celestial gesture
Raphael uses to define Plato.

Today, scholarship's spell suggests pursuing perfection unsullied by the lies of Scantron certainty,
the blasphemy of "teaching," tempting a mind
done-in by the mundane.

But even this day,
yes, joyously spent exploring among seekers, has healed
my spirit enough to sense must
in the academy's ether.

And to remember:
the mind can find knowledge
in a pantheon of ideas, but wisdom comes from learning to love
all that's less than perfect in the cosmos or a classroom.

Current Events

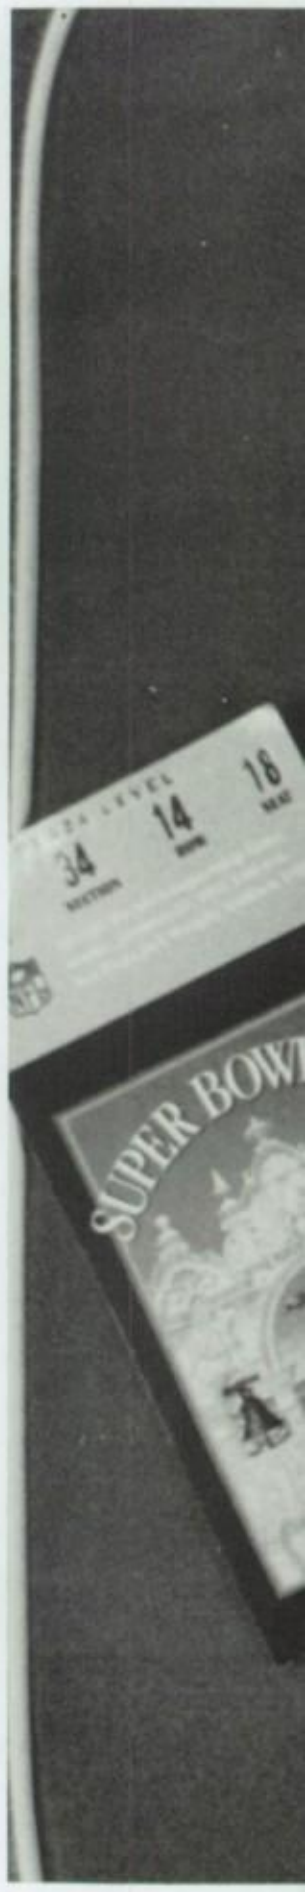
"The Greedy Era has ended!" — Newsweek Magazine

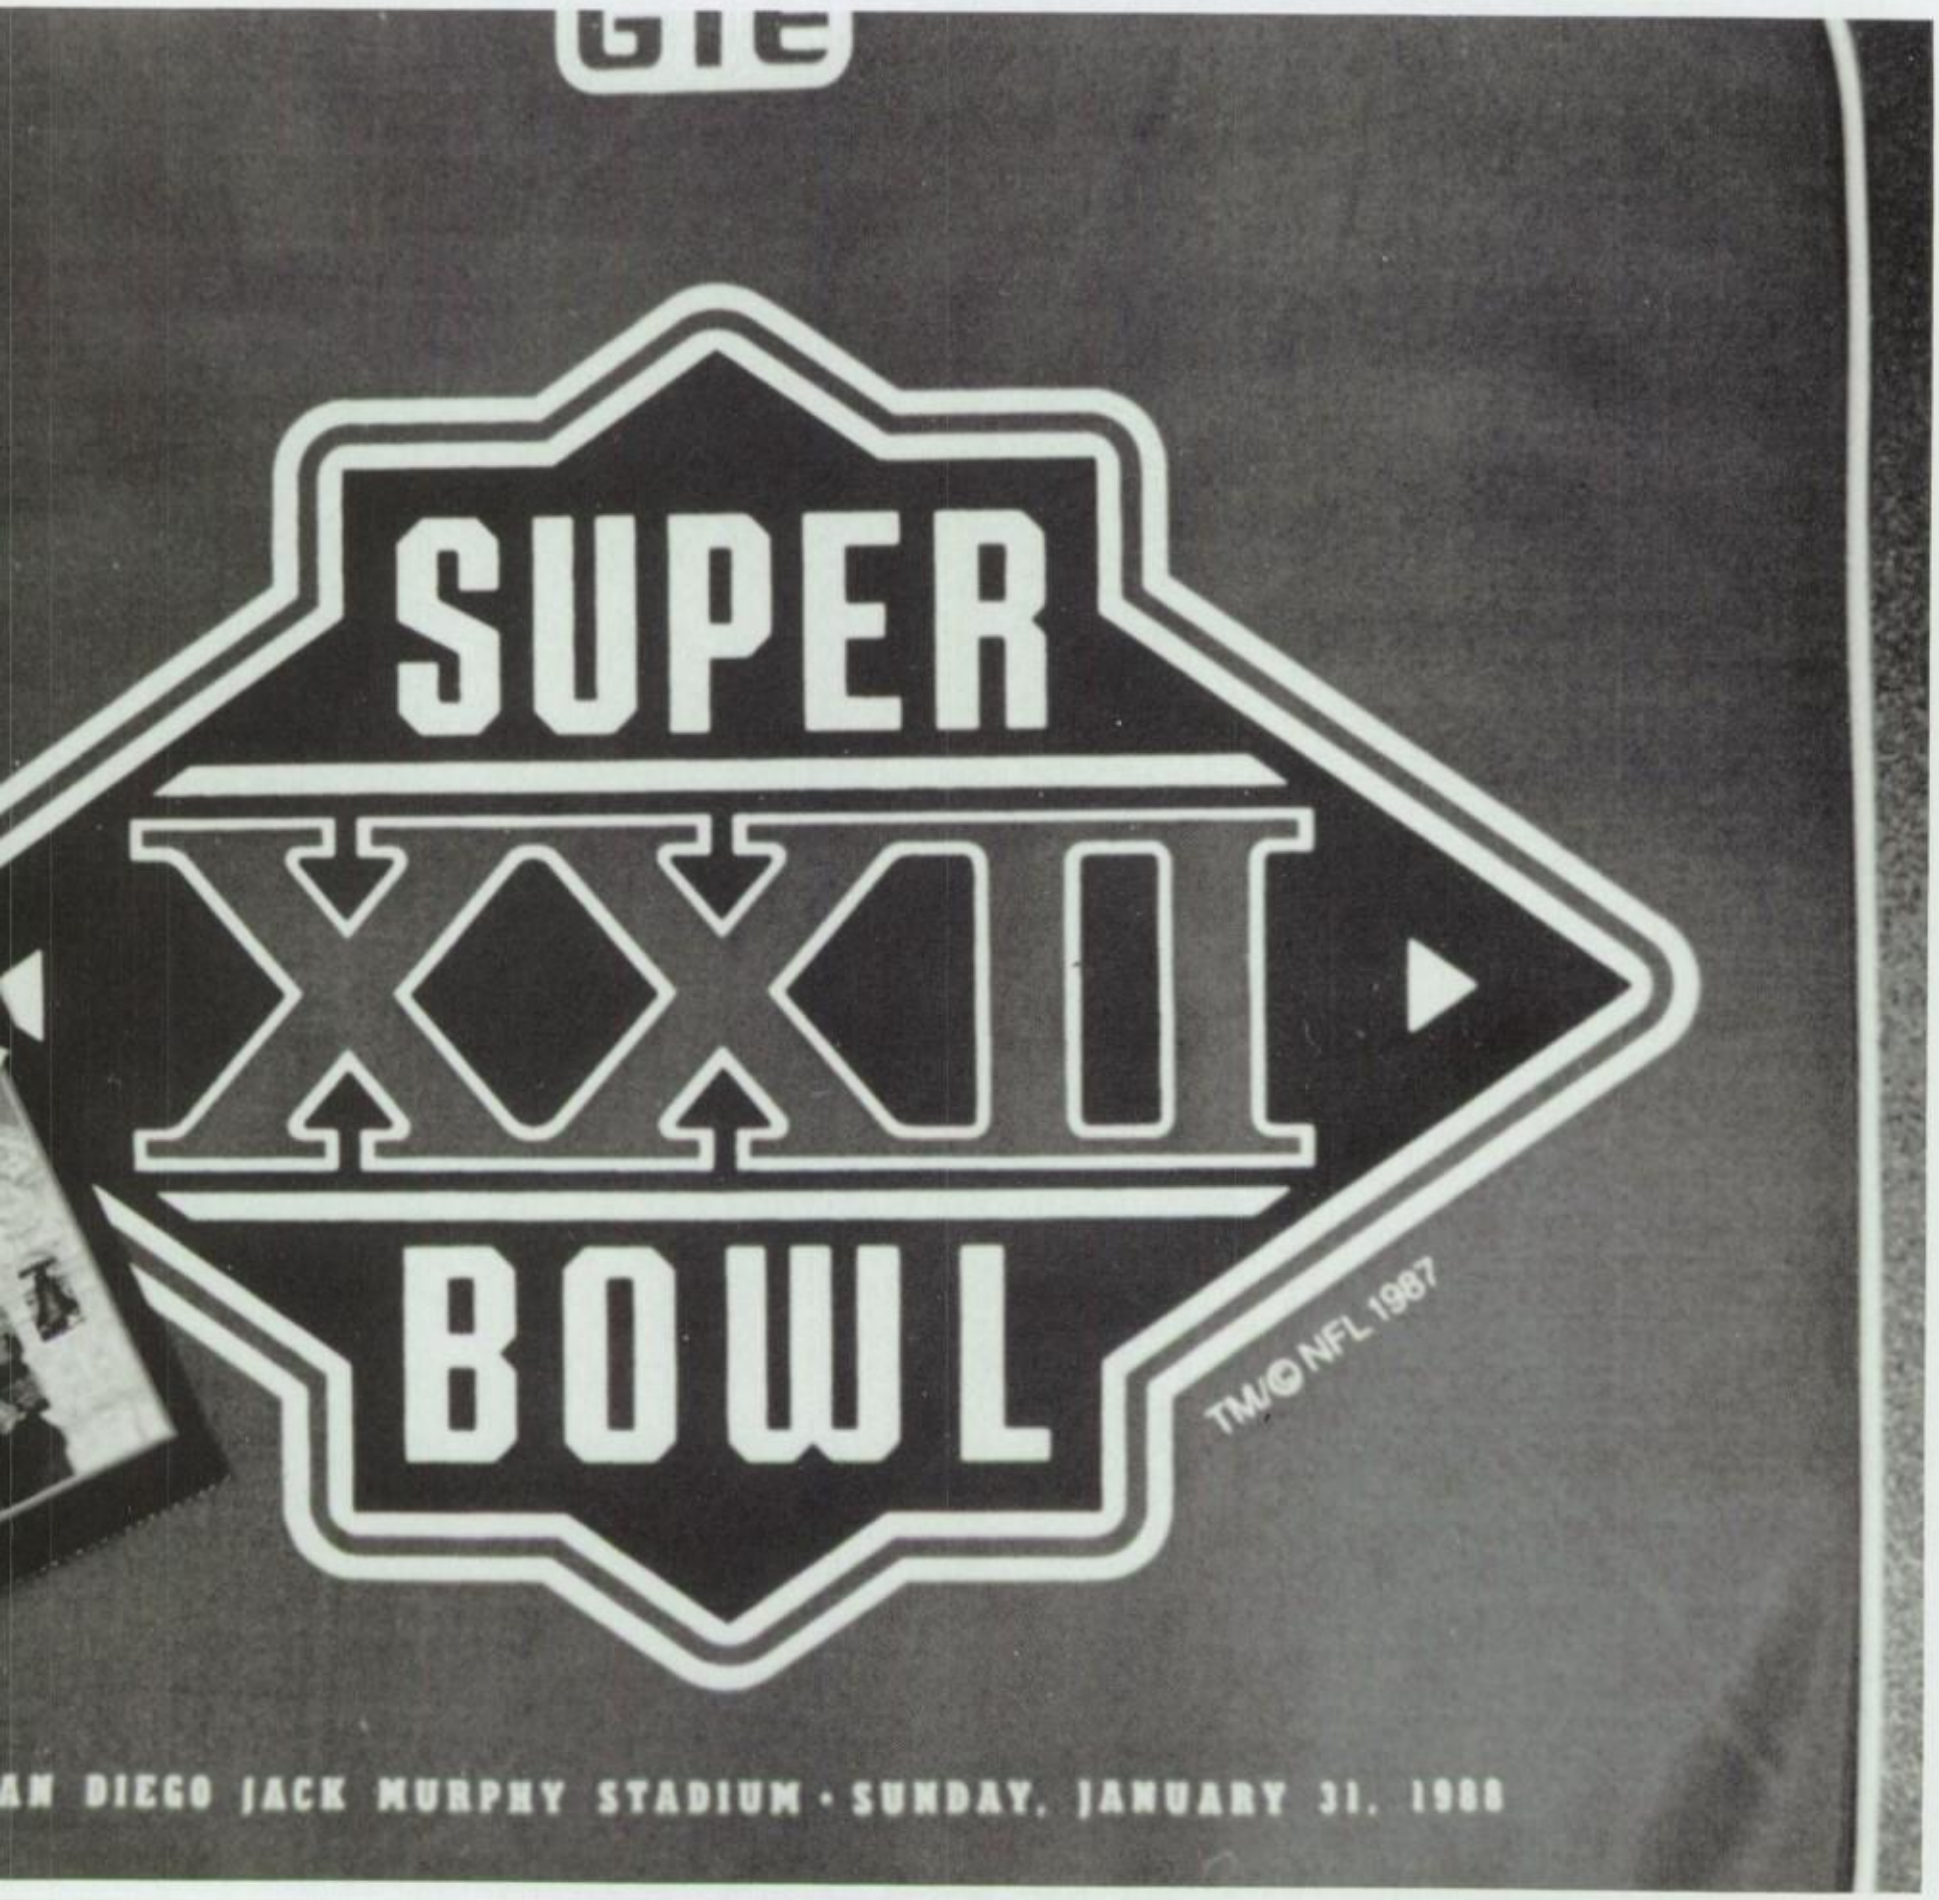
Out of News

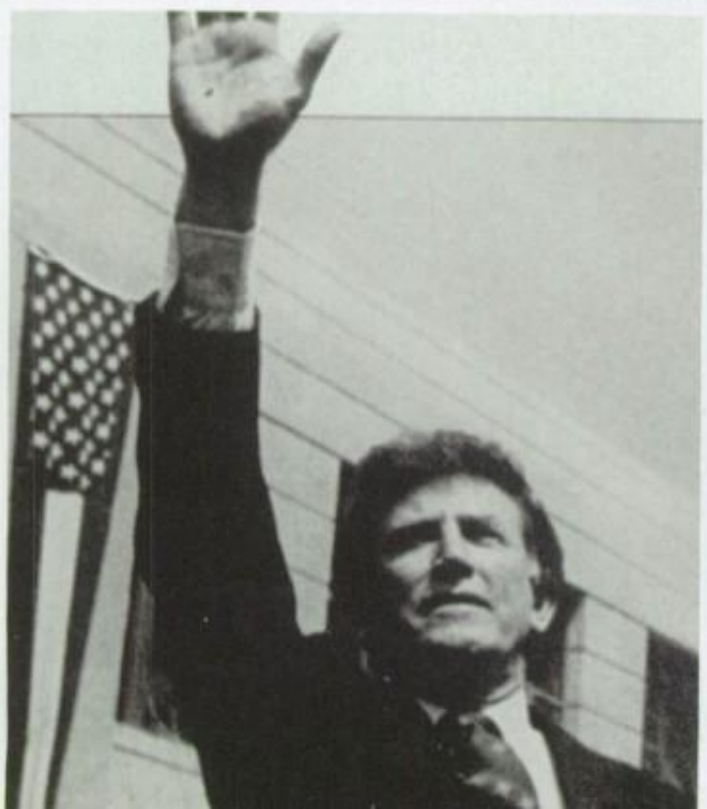
According to some, 1987 was the year of the bimbo with Gary "Wandering Heart" and the PTL scandal. However, with the turn of the new year, people were too busy watching the Winter Olympics or considering Presidential nominees and all scandals were pushed aside.

This past year was one which tested all emotions. We experienced Baby Jessica's pain and the horror from the stock market crash. Also, this year was important for world peace.

It seems as though the selfish era has ended and the humanitarian era has begun. It's about time people cared more about the other people as well as themselves. Still, the 1987-88 year left us with many unforgettable memories and prepared us for the many years left to experience.







"I'll love you to pieces!" — a line which became reality in Fatal Attraction.

Super Bowl '88 memories will be lasting for all San Diegoans.

Gary Hart re-enters the race although scandal has left his campaign far behind.

Safe Sex!

AIDS PREVENTION

As we all know, AIDS is a terminal disease whose death toll rose rapidly in these years. This past year, many safeguards were taken to try to prevent any unnecessary spreading of the contagion. First, everyone knows that the music that teens listen to has a great influence upon their actions. Performers such as George Michael, who promoted monogamy, and Madonna, who promoted Safe Sex on her tour, tried to make the public aware.

Another way to prevent the disease was to stop it before it happened. People in N.Y. offered free, sterile needles to drug addicts in turn for their old, infected ones. Another way to prevent the disease was through the use of condoms. In some of the more elite hotels people could find in the bathrooms a free shower cap, shampoo and a condom.

These steps helped us take a huge step in halting the spread of AIDS.

A bewildered Jessica is rescued from a well.

CAUGHT IN THE ACT

Towards the end of the summer, American warships were called upon to escort US-flag tankers safely through the Persian Gulf. These measures were taken to prevent attacks on the ships from Iran. Early one morning, exactly two months later, an Iranian cargo ship awoke to find their ship ablaze from machine gun rounds and rockets. On September 22, 1987, US helicopters fired upon a ship which was laying mines in the central Gulf. Although the Iranian's admitted that it was indeed a military ship of theirs, they denied that their job was sowing floating mines. However, US military officials who later boarded the boat, found 10 mines aboard the 1,662-ton Iran AJR. The US helicopters had originally discovered them as they were patrolling the heavily congested Persian Gulf. Iran felt that the impromptu attack was highly unnecessary and chose to respond with a vowing to retaliate to the attack and that the US has turned the Gulf into a "powder-keg." In otherwords, it aggravated a peaceful environment which once existed in the Middle East. Now the waters are no longer a peaceful passageway for trading ships.

BABY JESSICA

This year our country was given the opportunity to demonstrate our ability to sympathize when someone was feeling pain. Early in October, our country cried with the family of Baby Jessica. The 18-month toddler had been playing around a well located in Midland, Texas when she was accidentally knocked into the well. For almost 60 hours, Jessica McClure was cramped in a tiny space 22 feet below the ground.

Families from all over the state sent equipment while other Americans sent money. Firemen came from the area to free the child from what could have been her death trap. At times, the situation seemed grim. It was even reported that Jessica exclaimed, "Leave me alone." But just when everyone was feeling fatigued, shouts were heard as they lifted the child from the well.

ROYAL ADDITION

We all know that the Duchess of York, Sarah Fergusen, was the good friend of Diana, the Princess of Wales. Now it seemed that Fergie was taking another step in her friend's footsteps. It was announced early in 1988 that Fergie was pregnant.

Although it wasn't announced until January, the press had an idea for several weeks before the official announcement. Still the Royal Family stated, "If she [Fergie] was pregnant we'd make a formal announcement to officialize the statement. But we haven't, therefore it's not true."

When born, the child would be fifth in line for the throne.

PTL SCANDAL

"I'm not a bimbo!"

According to PEOPLE magazine, the thing that people trusted the least was the big money spender, the PTL minister, Jim Bakker. This year he was accused of keeping homosexual relationships and raping his church secretary, Jessica Hahn. Jim and Tammy were forced to give up their T.V. ministry and auction off their valuables such as their air-conditioned dog house.

However, the Lord must have given the Bakkers a second chance because they are now recuperating and are raising money with the hope of building a religious park in Palm Springs. One way that they were raising money was by having their good friend, Mickey Rooney, talk to us through our TVs, asking us to call and give the couple support through a Dial-the-Bakkers telephone line, (PHS, let your parents know before you call).

Still, the one who gained the most fame was not Tammy nor Jim. She was one of the three most popular young women of the year, besides Donna Rice and Fawn Hall. It was Jessica Hahn, the supposed victim of a rape committed by Jim Bakker. Jessica made an ample $1,000,000 for posing topless for Playboy magazine. Still she maintains, "I am not a bimbo!" So now, the choice is yours, do you agree with the PEOPLE poll, or do you trust the people with the double eyelashes?

Tammy Faye shows signs of defeat.

CRAIG PEYER TRIAL

On December 27, 1986 the body of 20-year-old Karen Knott was found dead beneath a 65-foot-high bridge just off of the deserted Mercy Road exit. On that evening several police officers, including Ex-officer Craig Peyer, were questioned as to the safety of women traveling alone at night. Within a week Craig Peyer was arrested as a suspect in the murder case. He was accused of pulling Knott over with his patrol car, ordering her to travel down the secluded Mercy Road exit, strangling her, then throwing her body over the bridge. Peyer insists that he was innocent.

About a year later, the trial came to court to determine the fate of the former CHP officer. Prosecuters provided almost one hundred female witnesses who all claimed that Peyer had pulled them over and insisted that they continue down the Mercy exit. Then, they claimed, he would proceed to talk to the women for hours and usually only give them a minor citation. Defense provided the evidence that there was a crazy man lunging at traffic that night. Perhaps Peyer had no contact with Karen. The defense ended their argument without Peyer ever having to take the stand, although the defense did have his wife testify on his behalf. The trial ended with a hung jury.

A SPECIAL CHRISTMAS

In the past years, musicians have banded together to make albums to benefit the world's less fortunate. Some events have been Live-Aid and Hands Across America. Often the songs have had a very political tone. However, in the 1987 holiday season, an album, A VERY SPECIAL CHRISTMAS, was released. It was nothing more than an album filled with favorite holiday carols. According to producer Jimmy Iovine, "The message is very simple, it's the kind of album you can play while you're putting up the Christmas tree."

Some of the performers were Sting, Bon Jovi, and U2. Some of the tunes sung were "Winter Wonderland," and "I Saw Mommy Kissing Santa Claus" by John Cougar Mellencamp. Mellencamp, who had two vertebrae removed when he was less than a month old, had a more personal motive to participate in the project. "When I see people in wheelchairs, I think that could have been me," thus, he is eager to assist with productions to benefit the Special Olympics. Within the first month that the album was released, $2.5 million had been raised. According to TIME magazine, "Even the Grinch might agree that there's plenty of holiday cheer in that."

PRESIDENTIAL NOMINEES

Democrats

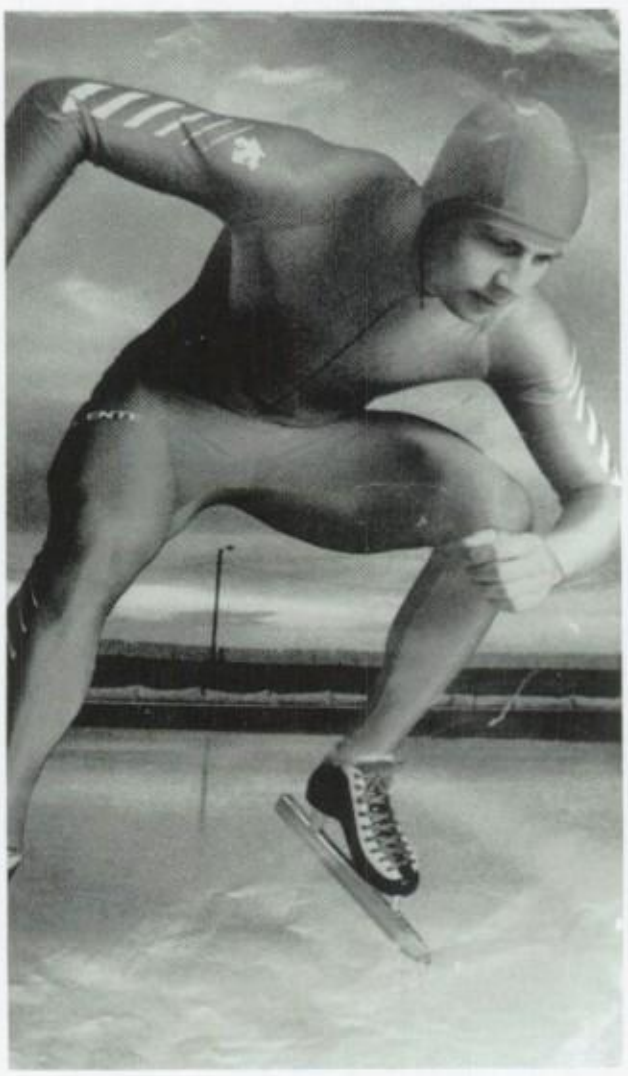
With Ronald Reagan's 8-year Presidential term almost complete, we were faced with choosing a new President to fill the empty spot. The Democratic Nominee in the 1988 election were: Richard Gephardt, Paul Simon, Michael Dukakis, Jesse Jackson, Bruce Babbitt, Gary Hart, and Albert Gore. Although Jesse Jackson was the favored as far as popularity votes, most experts agreed that his chances of winning were slim. If a Democratic President was elected, he'd be working with a Democratic party supporting him as well.

Republicans

As a Republican President leaves the office, many people wondered if another Republican would fill his shoes. The nominees were Jack Kemp, Robert Dole, Pat Robertson, George Bush, Pete DuPont, and Alexander Haig. Around February, it was rumored that George Bush was relying on his Vice-Presidential duties and experience to help him win the election. Also, Jack Kemp made a few television ads which bothered both Bush and Dole. He was trying to say that he should be the conservative alternate for the front runners.

WINTER OLYMPICS

Every four years, the best athletes from nations around the world gather together, despite political differences, and compete in the Olympic Games. February 15th was the official Opening Ceremonies of the 1988 Winter Olympics. This year they were held in the freezing temperatures of Calgary, Canada. Some of the more popular sports, although all were favored by many, were the graceful Figure Skating, the tricky Slalom Skiing, the rough Hockey, and the swift Bobsled. Also, this year, the most popular souvenir was the Official T-shirt of the Bermuda Bobsleding Team. This was a humorous shirt displaying natives bobsledding under the sun. US Figure Skater Brian Boitano, who came away with a gold, and Italian Skiier Alberto Tomba, nicknamed La Bamba, were two popular athletes. And although there were the separate medal winners, everyone was a champion.



Speed skating was a sport that the US was favored in.

MADONNA SPLIT

Ever since actress/musician Madonna and the actor, Sean Penn, tied the knot in a private ceremony, people have been quietly holding their breath, waiting for any mishaps. Perhaps people were afraid that Penn, with his famous temper, would turn on them if they stated anything against the marriage, but most people knew that it was doomed from the start. One day, when returning from a prison sentence, Penn was greeted with divorce papers.

Another celebrity divorce was the one involving the 6-foot beauty, Brigitte Nielsen and Sylvester "Rocky" Stallone. After reported affairs of Brigitte and the producer of Beverly Hills Cop II, and other stories found in the NATIONAL ENQUIRER divorce papers were signed. According to some, the marriage was simply a way to promote their professional careers as well as their popularity. As of February 14th, Rocky is said to have found a new love. This girl fits the classic Rocky women image. She's beautiful and blonde. It is rumored that once again, Rocky is hearing wedding bells.

STOCK CRASH!

Like our grandparents recalled the Great Depression of the 20's, we'll be telling our grandchildren stories of the terrible Black Monday. That horrifying Monday was the start of a week-long series of stock market crashes. When the stocks of Dow Jones fell 508 points in October of 1987, many felt that the world would relive the Depression of the '20's. In fact, according to a trader on the Los Angeles floor of the Pacific Stock Exchange, "This (was) going to make 1929 look like a kiddie party." People became very irate and many suicides were supposedly attempted. However, as the week drew to a close, and people were ready to leave the country out of desperation, shouts of joy and sighs of relief were heard when stocks increased by 102.27 points.

Till Death do us part

HEEEEEEERE'S GARY!

Earlier in the year, Presidential nominee, Gary Hart dropped out of the race due to evidence of his lying and unfaithfulness. He wasn't unfaithful to his country but to his wife. Gary was pictured sitting on the boat "Monkey Business" with the attractive model, Donna Rice, on his lap. Thus, the boat was appropriately named. However, Gary claims that the girl just happened to appear on his lap.

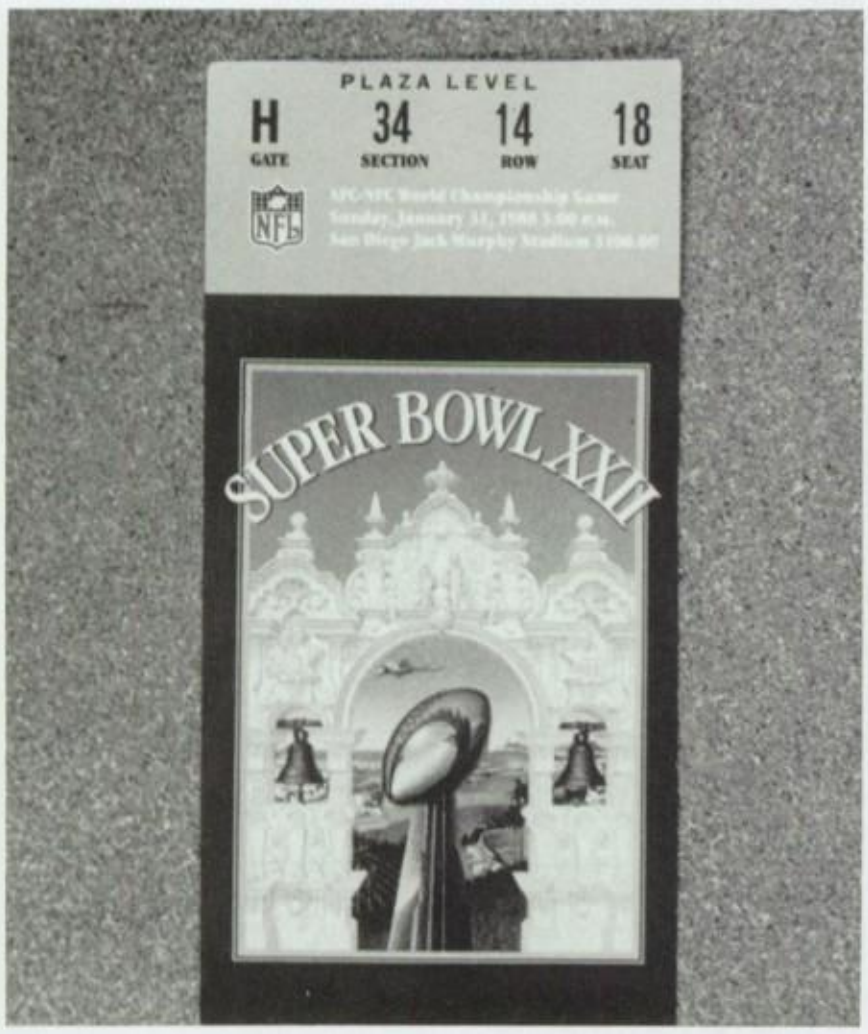
However, both Hart and Rice came out of this incident better off than before. Rice received a contract promoting "No Excuses" jeans and Hart reentered the presidential race. However, his chances for election were worse than before, and once again, he dropped out.

SUPERBOWL

San Diego hosted one of the biggest sports events in the year of 1988. In this big event, the Super Bowl, the Denver Broncos battled against the Washington Redskins. The favored Broncos lost the game by a whopping 32 points. The final score was 42-10.

However, the game wasn't the only spectacular event. Many students from Poway High School, as well as neighboring school, participated in what were the best Half-time and Pre-Game shows. The Super Bowl brought in 140 million dollars. Quipped Gary Bradshaw, "With 2 million people in San Diego, that's $70 per person, so where is my $70?"

A valuable much-wanted Super Bowl ticket.



Glenn Close portrays the innocent woman that we know she isn't.

STOP CHEATING

What one thing has done the most to promote monogamy besides the AIDS scare? The movie hit of the year, FATAL ATTRACTION, starring Glenn Close and Michael Douglas. This movie presented an extreme point as to what can go wrong if you choose to be unfaithful. This movie has influenced such items, as seen on David Letterman, as the Fatal Attraction luggage, which sports a pop-up picture of the assailant Glenn Close. This was stated to be an excellent way for housewives to remind their traveling husbands of how much they have at home and what can be the outcome of a one-night fling while on the road.

200 YEARS OLD

For a historical event which happened this past year, the 200th year anniversary of the writing of the Constitution couldn't go unnoticed. There were countless celebrations which started in Philadelphia where the legendary words originated. Then the Fourth of July was celebrated with a big gala at the recently redone Statue of Liberty.

How did this Constitution come to exist? Well, two hundred years ago, 55 men spent a long, hot summer arguing for the Constitution. Actually, they had originally gathered to suggest some improvements in the Articles of Confederation. Main conflicts were separated by territory, North against South. Although there were 13 colonies in the country at the time, only 9 colonies were needed to ratify the Constitution. So exactly 9 colonies approved and thus, the Constitution was born. So, 200 years later, in the midst of our endless celebrations, it would be nice if we took a moment to recall the great men such as Roger Sherman, Alexandar Hamilton, James Madison, and Rufus King who worked to make a successful nation.

Pope Scopes Here!

PAPAL TOUR

In this materialistic era, people collected and saved many souvenirs. One of the most popular of 1987 was the Pope Scope. What's a Pope Scope, you might ask? It was a mini-periscope which fans used to view the Pope on his visit to the States. In September, Pope John Paul II made a voyage to the US to complete a 17,000-mile pastoral journey. According to the Pope, he came "as a Pilgrim in the cause of justice and human solidarity." Some of the highlights of his visit were his remarks dealing with the church's views on homosexuality and the Pope's first statement regarding AIDS: "The Church is doing all that is possible to heal and especially to prevent the moral background" of the disease.

Pope John Paul greets many admirers.

ATV's BANNED

The greatest feeling on earth was to have freedom to go where you want. It's even better when you had the fresh air blowing through your hair. When riding All Terrain Vehicles (ATVs), a cross between a motorcycle and a dune buggy, you would get the sensation of never wanting to end the ride. However, what would happen if you ended the ride wrapped up in a barbed wire fence, or worse, wrapped up with another ATV? According to TIME magazine, "Nearly 7,000 people (were) injured in ATV accidents each month, and an estimated 900 people (had) been killed over the past five years." In response to the frequent mishaps, ATV sales have been outlawed. James Florio, Congressman from NJ, stated, "How can anyone truly be concerned with safety, in effect say 'Tough Luck' to people who currently own (ATVs)?"

WHAS 'SAPPENIN?

San Diego is known for its weather and its location which is close to glamorous Los Angeles. People think that we spend thousands of dollars on entertainment. However, as teenagers in 1987-88, we remember that it was simply untrue. So, where did teens go in San Diego for fun? Although the Hard Rock Cafe was closely located in Los Angeles, it took a lot of money to get there along with a lot of time. However, there was a substitute right here in downtown. People were flocking to the Corvette Diner, a replica of a 50's diner with authentic Green River Floats. Yes, they did have classic Corvettes in the restaurant. For those people who needed a cure for their lead foot, and the speeding tickets were beginning to become expensive, there was the Malibu Grand Prix. Here you could drive as fast, and as often, as you wanted and the prices were excellent! Now people often thought that at the end of the weekend, they would be out of money so there was nothing to do. Not true, teens could be found sitting around the TV watching shows such as 21 Jumpstreet and Family Ties. So, since the whole country thought that we spent bundles of money on the weekends to have fun, why spoil their beautiful image of what San Diegoans are like. After all, people find out quickly enough, when they move here that you don't need "thousands" of dollars just to keep on the move.

FOREIGN VISITERS

In the late summer months, San Diego received two very honored guests. The guests would stay for almost 2/3 of the year dining on Eucalyptus and sleeping within the boundaries of the San Diego Zoo.

San Diego was flattered to receive the two Giant Pandas, Basi and Yuan Yuan, from China. Trainers from China worked with our staff to make their stay a pleasant one. The pandas became the single most successful exhibit at the zoo and when it came time for them to leave, early in February, many people mourned. A few will remember the Pandas as the "Expensive Nappers," but we can all recall that they are both, "more than the average bear."

RETURN TO NAM

A lot of people remember the ordeal of fighting in the Vietnam war. However, for those who don't, many movies were made to try to explain to the public just how rough it was in Nam. The rolling attraction to Nam in the theater started with PLATOON. Next came a less explicit HAMBURGER HILL followed by GOOD MORNING VIETNAM. The last movie provided facts along with comic relief by Robin Williams. Although some people may feel that it was unnecessary to make so many movies about Nam, how else could the public understand the emotional ordeals experienced during that war?

La Bamba!

PEACE SUMMIT

It had been two long years since the first time that Ronald Reagan, the President of the United States, and Mikhail Gorbachev, the Premiere of USSR, had met in Geneva in 1985. Since that time, a lot of bargaining and consideration had been given to the Arms Treaty. In December of 1987, Reagan and Gorbachev met again to consider the signing of a peace treaty to remove warheads from either country. They signed the document simply titled, "Treaty Between the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics on the Elimination of their Intermediate-Range and Shorter Range Missles." This 169 page treaty contained seventeen articles and three annexes. For years, people had debated over just about every word in the treaty. According to TIME Magazine, "This mass of legalese is one of the simplest, most radical attempts in history by the leaders of two adversary nations to resolve a point of tension between them." Basically, our country and the Soviet country have finally reached an agreement regarding many nuclear warheads. The 1987 Summit talks have been a success and now, the United States will remove a total of 436 warheads. The USSR, however, will remove almost four times as many. They will remove a total of 1,575 warheads. This may seem unfair, but this decision wasn't compulsory.

Gorbachev is an expressive leader.

RECYCLING OLD TUNES

It is almost a given fact that all trends travel around the time clock more than once. They are created and returned at least one more time. This was apparent not only in fashion, (miniskirts), and cars, (Mustangs), but in music as well. Some of this year's biggest hits were remakes of another group's original tunes. Also, some previous rock stars came back and reclaimed their position at the top of the charts. One hit was redone by the all-women group, The Bangles, who sang HAZY SHADE OF WINTER for a soundtrack. The original was done by an all-male band, Simon & Garfunkel. A previous celebrity who returned was George Harrison with his new single, I GOT MY MIND SET ON YOU. This just shows that rock these days is more open to various kinds of people as well as songs. In this day and age where people ranging from 16-40 can write hit songs, or remake oldies, which hit the number 1 spot on the charts, Rock-n-Roll is here to stay.

GO TWINS!

This was the year for Minnesota's comeback in sports. Although they didn't make it to the Super Bowl (they were defeated by the Broncos at the playoffs), they did make it to the 1987 World Series of baseball. The Minnesota Twins rallied against the Cardinals for a week. The Series was played for the whole 7 games with the last game as the deciding vote. The Twins beat the Cardinals to earn the Championship.

This return to the spot light was an exceptional feat. The last time that the Twins got this high was in the '60's. That was almost twenty years ago that the Twins participated in the Series. Now the fans of the Twins have found a new faith and insist that the Twins will return once again next year to protect their title as champions.

OBITUARIES

Fred Astaire

Many can remember the days when Fred used to created magic on the dance floor along with his female partner Ginger Rogers. Together they created movie history.

Henry Ford II

When we hear Ford, we immediately think of cars. This man was the chairman of the Board of Ford Motor Company and the grandson of the original car inventor.

Jackie Gleason

What would TV have been without The Honeymooners? And where would Honeymooners have been without Ralph Kramden. Gleason is best known for his role in this series.

Rita Hayworth

Before our time, and even before some of our parent's time, there existed a beautiful woman who made movies. When people thought of films, the glamorous Hayworth would come to mind immediately.

Liberace

It is always sad to hear of the death of a great musician and devastating to learn that he died of AIDS. The piano music of Liberace will long be remembered.

Andy Warhol

Best known for his saying, "Everyone will be famous for 15 seconds in their lifetime," and his off-beat art, this creator will be missed greatly.

Advertising

"Advertisements helped me to see active businesses in print."
— Gretchen Beck

Out of Business

Color pictures. Outrageous designs. The mini-mag. These and other features became a part of the PHS Odyssey as a result of the yearbook staff members' efforts. Each year a competition develops among the staff to sell the most ads to businesses. This year's winners, Sarah Massengill and Kim Mayland, were awarded free yearbooks for their diligent efforts.

In addition to ads from businesses, student ads were available to PHS students. "The student ads made the ad section a lot more interesting," said Sarah Massengill. According to Anaelisa Romero, "It gave students a chance to express their feelings toward friends."

We extend a special thank you to everyone who supported the 1988 Odyssey!

Andy Bailey deftly handles an obscene phone call at RB Home Video.

Garrick Tomiyama busies himself during "rush hour" at J. Higby's.

In hopes of a promotion, Christy Rogelstad continues to price unending boxes of thermal underwear.

I bought this space simply to make an impression on the school as it has made an ever-lasting one on me. Sean Poppoff — you're truly the greatest friend I have ever had. I couldn't have made it without you. Ray Underberg, thanks for being there. I'll never forget you. Melissa McCool, you're truly an inspiration to me. Thanks for helping me take that first step when I was too depressed to even walk. I wish you the best. Pete Secor, thanks for saving my Calc. grade. Go to M.I.T. and don't implode! Emily B., you are a great friend. It's been real. Allison L. Morp was a blast. Welcome to California. I hope you stay. Jenny Coon, I hope you find your knight in shining armor. Yvonne P., my Sadie's bud, I'll always remember you and the chicken. Deanna S., Thanks for the dance. Enjoy your years at PHS. Terry A., someday you and Leslie will stand at the altar. Mark Naylor, someday J.D. will want capital "T" from you. Does she have a phone? Gabby A., Where's your harem? Keith Ball, I want to see you at PROM. Jay Blankenbeckler, you're a rebel of a "New Order." Drive Neville nuts for me. Neville Saner, I won't ever forgive you and Kapp for making me sit and destroy my confidence. It's wrong. I don't know how you can live with yourself.

To all my friends on the B-ball team, I still had fun and the games were free. I wish you the best. Cheerleaders, thanks for the support and f or the cookies. Shari W., You had your chance and you blew it. Eric Wetzell, you are like a mirror image of me. You've helped me understand myself. Thanks for being a friend. PHS faculty, You're the greatest! Dix Davis, I'll never forget the impact you've had on me. You're the greatest. Bill Rarity, I have great respect and admiration for you. You're a super person. To everyone at PHS, have fun and good luck! (you'll need it if you get Mrs. Fulwiler!) I wish you the best. PHS, thanks for everything! Debbie Potter, will you ever go out with me? Mom and Dad, thanks for being there for me. I probably would have killed myself without you. I love you more than you can possibly imagine!

Success, here I come!

Sincerely,
Robert Michael Melotti

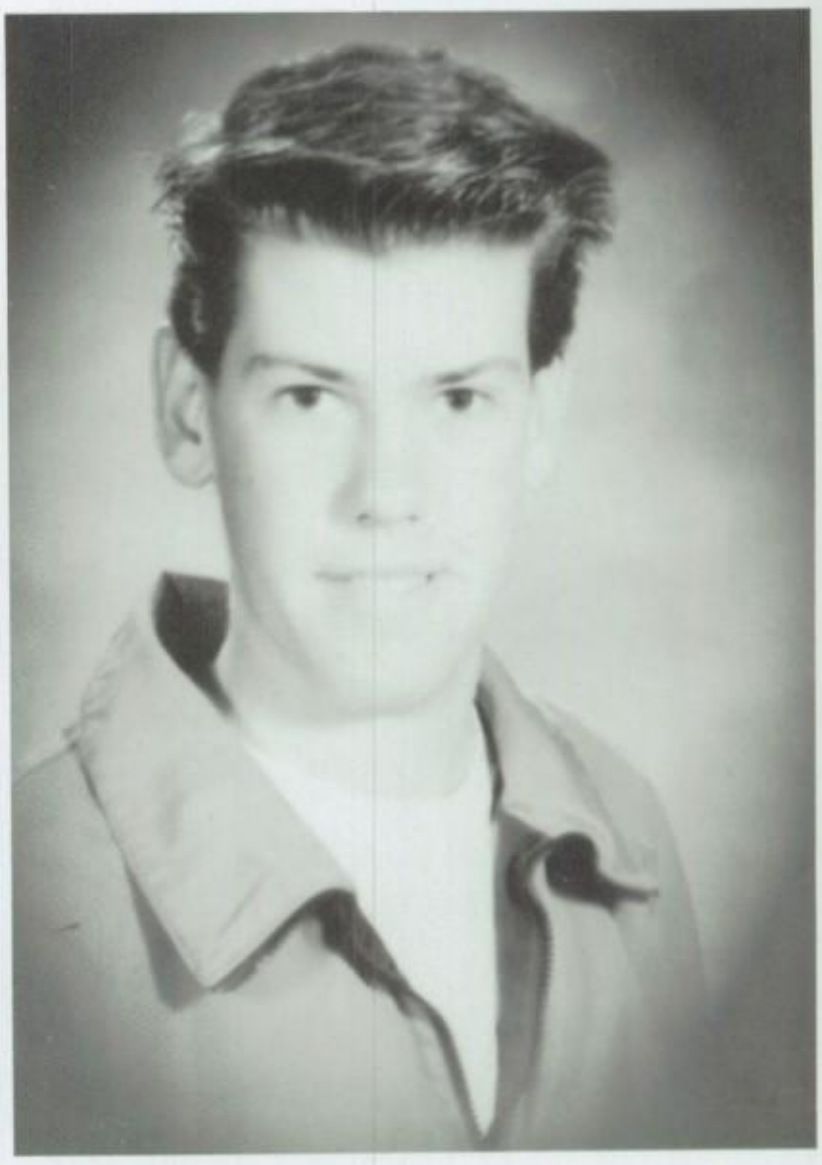
On February 15, 1987 a dear friend, Ronnie Robertson, passed away due to a heart attack. There are so many things that one can say in remembrance of him. He was athletic, smart, and good-looking. Ronnie was a friend to everyone and looked on the bright side of everything. All of these qualities were important, but none of them really mattered that much to Ronnie. The one thing that stands out in many people's minds about him is the peace he found through his relationship with Jesus Christ. To Ronnie, God wasn't just a big person out there who didn't care, he was concerned with his everyday life. If Ronnie could have left the world with just one thought, we're certain that he would have told everyone to be sure that they have a relationship with God . . . Good bye Ronnie . . . We love you, and will miss you. But those of us who know God will be seeing you soon.



The PHS PEER COUNSELING program would like to thank it's graduating PC's for helping make Poway High a better place and wishes all Seniors luck and happiness in the future.

Out of School

For the last time, a sharp bell sounded. Anxious students poured out of classrooms, not only happy because they had taken their last finals, but because the long awaited last day of school was over. Students impatiently ran to their cars or buses and thought of summer plans ahead.

Meanwhile, seniors, either at the beach or loafing around town, thought about the graduation that evening that would finally be theirs. After the handshakes, the embraces, and the night's celebration, they faced the future's real question: would they take control of their lives, find new directions, a new set of worthwhile goals; or, would they, like so many days spent here, resist a direction and roam throughout their lives "out of control"?

College Pursuit

"What do you want to be when you grow up?" questioned teachers throughout elementary and middle school. When students began high school, that question was replaced by: "What college do you plan to attend?" For most, the searching began in their junior year. However, a few eager students started as early as their freshman year. year.

Students decided on which colleges and universities or trade schools would meet their needs. The Eureka computer, located in the Titan Center, helped in these decisions. A few simple questions guided toward career and personal goals were all that needed answering before the computer printed out what colleges met the needs of the student. "Eureka was really easy to use once I was taught how. It helped me narrow down the choices a great deal," stated Julie Murphy. A list of scholarships was posted and updated throughout the year to inform students about available money. Many of these required an essay written about various subjects. Finally, when acceptance and rejection letters arrived in the spring, many students were paid off from all of their time and effort by being accepted to their favorite college.

Working World

Mom and Dad have just informed you: they, unfortunately, will not be providing you with the modest stereo system you've picked out for your birthday. No matter how much you plead for the equalized, wooferized, compact disk, cassette, turntable and remote stereo, they still don't give in. Big brother and sister don't seem too excited about buying the apparatus for you either. You have no choice but to make the money for your dream system yourself. And hey, didn't you just see that "Help Wanted" sign up in the local Carl's Jr.? It's a dirty job, but all you can think about is John Bon Jovi's screams, coming out of your own 30-inch speakers. Everyone remembers his first job, what caused him to join the work world.

Growing up means more responsibilities, and in most parents' eyes that means paying for some of your own expenses. Whether it is concert tickets, a new outfit, or dinner on the town, some extra cash in the pocket for your own personal spending is always nice. Lisa Rosenbaum reflected, "Even if it is only twenty dollars — it's nice to know you earned it yourself."

Seniors

As graduation crept closer, like Old Man Time on painfully slow legs, we, the seniors, paused from time to time, to take a careful look at this school, our home. We paused, perhaps, in the hallways, in the classrooms, on the football field. We looked at the campus and then looked closer, sharper, past the buildings. We looked at the people, our friends. Somewhere trapped inside the joy of graduation, the last act of childhood, mingled our sorrow. We looked again at the faces of friends, the ones who gave us their support. Among those young faces we encountered, we saw older ones too, a teacher, a counselor. We heard our voices say, "See you at the ten-year reunion." But, inside, we really knew we would never be the same to each other. Time would pass and each one of us and our friends would change. Things never would be the same again. The truth made us sad while we waited, with a tear, a hope, a dream and a smile, for Graduation Day.

Colophone

Out of Control, the twenty-seventh volume of Poway High School's ODYSSEY, was printed by Herff Jones Yearbook Company of Marceline, Missouri, in a 9x12 format with 392 pages. It was the largest book in San Diego county. All pages and cover were designed by the staff members. Two thousand copies were printed.

Blalack's Portrait World shot the Underclass mugs and Busco Nestor studios shot the senior portraits. Busco Nestor also provided 75 rolls of color film and almost 600 rolls of black and white. They processed, enlarged color photos, and printed a few black and white pictures.

The students and staff appeared on the pages. Exactly 700 seniors, 728 juniors, 754 sophomores, and 735 freshmen added up to 2917 students. That's a lot of people to be covered by only 22 staff members! The job proved to be tough, but with the dedication and hard work everyone provided, we produced the best Odyssey ever.

A special thank you to Kim Wayland, head photographer, and to the other photographers for their long hours spent at the Photo Darkroom printing hundreds of high-quality photos. Also, thanks to Kristen Yamasaki, who proofread all of the pages. Great Job!
